Time Away From Chores Vital To Chester Conservation Farmers

These Chester County Conservation of the Year farmers make it a point to spend time as a family, one weekend a month, having fun — whether it's jumping off an eight-foot board into their one-acre farm pond, shooting hoops, or playing with their Collie, Tipper's, litter of puppies. And while there are lots of chores to be done, the owners pictured here — Ken and Marilyn Umble — know how important it is to get away from the tiestalls every once in a while and enjoy farm life. Photo by Andy Andrews

ATGLEN (Chester Co.) — Near the large silo stands a basketball hoop. Across the streambank is nestled a pond with a diving board.

Below carefully manicured strip covers, in the "glen" that makes up part of the eastern section of the town of Atglen, is Glen Valley Farm.

And while there are lots of chores to be done, the owners — Ken and Marilyn Umble with children Brandon, 15, Jordan, 12, and Scott, 8 — know how important it is to get away from the tiestalls every once in a while and enjoy farm life.

Sometimes, said Marilyn, you just can't look at how much money it will cost you to bring in hired hands for relief on the weekends. "It's your health, and it's your mental health that I think you need to take care of that you can't always measure by money," she said. "You have to decide if some things are worth more than money."

These Chester County Conservation of the Year farmers make it a point to spend time as a family, one weekend a month, having fun. They often leave their farm to visit a hunting cabin in northern Pennsylvania. If they stay at home, fun involves jumping off an eight-foot board into their one-acre farm pond, shooting hoops, or playing with their Collie, Tipper's, litter of puppies.

When time comes to return to the daily, often dreary, farm chores, Marilyn admitted that the family can feel refreshed and maintain a positive outlook, despite times that are far from positive for dairy families.

"I struggle with my attitude some days," said Marilyn. "I think it is a matter of attitude. I try to help my boys not compare themselves to their non-farm friends."

Increasingly, farmers in Chester County have to deal with the reality that their children are in school with families that have little or no farm background.

For Marilyn, she said, "It's

Poultry Progress Days Examines Issues Affecting Industry

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The poultry industry heard good news at the annual Poultry Progress Day held on Thursday at the Farm and Home Center.

The good report showed that it is a relatively calm year for respiratory problems in birds, the county can look forward to a prosperous agriculture future, and the industry is way a head of the general farm population in implementing nutrient management proposals.

Producers learned about vaccine research, poultry disease and how to protect both flocks and themselves from harmful environments.

Dr. Michael Hulet of Penn State opened the educational seminar with ways to lower broiler condemnations that result from overscald, contamination, cadavers, bruises, tumors, synovitis, leukoses, air sacrilitis, and septicemia.

The causes for condemnations are always the result of disease, processing failure and environmental mismanagement and may be resolved or at least decreased, Hulet said.

Winter ventilation plays havoc with many flocks. With charts and slides, Hulet showed how fluctuating temperatures affect birds and increase ammonia problems. He stressed the importance of static pressure to bring in air with enough velocity so that air circulates and is brought to the middle of the house before tumbling

Questions? They Had Answers At Bradford Dairy Days

CAROLYN N. MOYER

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.)—What's the best protection against skin cancer?

What's your leadership style?

How can I lower feed costs for my dairy herd?

These questions and more were answered at the annual Bradford County Dairy Day held at SRU Middle School in East Smithfield on Monday, Feb. 19, where farmers could sit in on educational programs, take advantage of free skin cancer screenings, and visit with the 47 commercial exhibitors.

While early spring weather makes many long to feel the strong, warm rays of the sun, others are living examples of the effects of prolonged sun exposure. According to the American Association of Dermatology, one out of six will come down with skin cancer sometime in their life and there will be one million new cases this year alone.

In light of this information, nearly 50 people took advantage of the free skin cancer screenings offered by the New York Center for Agricultural Medicine and Health (NYCAMH) in conjunction with Bassett Hospital, Cooperstown, N.Y.

For some who underwent the screening, the process was all too familiar. Some had had cancerous lesions removed previously and others had suspicious marks which the physician's assistant in dermatology determined could be precancerous spots.

"It's a serious occupational hazard for farmers," said Carol Evans RN with NYCAMH. "This is our fifth year doing skin cancer screenings in dairy farmers and we see a large amount of skin cancer."

NYCAMH is a regular at such shows as Empire Farm Days in New York and has been to Ag Progress Days at Rockspring in the past. By offering free screenings, the farmers have an opportunity to have a private checkup without having to make a special trip to the doctor.

Nearly 50 exhibitors packed the gym of SRU High School during Bradford County's annual Dairy Day program. Besides visiting the exhibits, dairymen had the opportunity to hear educational programs, win door prizes and earn pesticide credits.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE:

Prices were unchanged on heavier weights, but lower on mediums in the Northeast and in some locations in the Midwest, balance of areas were unchanV *9IQ=9was mostly steady to fully steady on large and heavier weights but still unsettled to weak on mediums. Demand for cartoned product was irregular ranging from slow to fairly good, best where aided by promotional activity. Supplies were fully adequate on mediums and barely adequate to sufficient on large. Although, some increased availability of lighter weight product was reported to breakers, supplies were noted in a range of short to adequate. Most breakers were unaggressive but occasionally a buyer would bid slightly higher. Live hen offerings were more than adequate for processors needs.

National Grain Market

Wednesday Mar 06, 1996

Wet forecasts for winter wheat areas and continued fund selling on the board, kept wheat bids sliding downward. Corn and soybean bids, however, were up slightly as a corrective manuver and improved export demand overnight added strength.

Wheat steady to 5 cents lower. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 to 2 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 6 cents higher. Moisture is still in the forecast for hard red winter wheat growing areas, however, it may be in the form of snow. Temperatures dropped today and severe lows are in store for the next few days. Some snow showed up in forecasts across the US, North and South. Export sales were nil today for wheat but for the week, figures look pretty good. Declines were limited by stronger corn and soybean bids. Corn and soybean bids were supported by some overnight export purchases. Corn has done excellent in the export game so far this week. Traders corrected the recent lows traded over the past few days on the board.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 11-17, 1996

ST. PATRICK'S DAY, MARCH 17.

APPLE JOHN

Our American folk hero, Johnny Appleseed (John Chapman) died on March 11, 1847. In celebration of his fruitful travels, we ponder a few apples including the apple-john, which is reputed to keep for two years and taste best when shriveled. There's also the apple-pie bed, another name for a short-sheeted bed, with its linen folded so one's legs cannot stretch out. This deviates from a bed in apple-pie order, which is prim and perfect. Both phrases may come from nappe pliée, French for folded linen.

"I am withered like an old apple-john." – Shakespeare, Henry IV

TIP OF THE WEEK

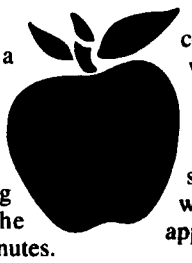
MAPLE APPLE CARAMEL

4 large apples
1 cup maple syrup
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 cup cream
2 tablespoons brandy
pinch of salt
1/2 cup water

Put water and maple syrup in a saucepan just large enough to hold the four whole apples. Boil this while coring and peeling the apples, about 3 minutes.



Immerse apples in the syrup and simmer until tender, about 20 minutes, turning several times. Remove apples and keep them warm. Boil down the syrup to about 1/2 cup. Add butter and let it melt, then add cornstarch mixed with the cream. Let thicken over low heat. Add brandy and salt, then pour warm syrup over apples and serve.

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

The March Sun causes dust and the winds do blow it about.

So many mists in March, so many frosts in May.

A peck of March dust and a shower in May, Makes the corn green and the fields gay.

A Kerry shower is for 24 hours.

– Irish proverb

OPINION

Family First

Attitude makes all the difference in whether or not happiness can ever be part of a farming operation.

What that means may be simple to understand by those who already have it, but for those frustrated by mounting or seemingly overwhelming obstacles, it is difficult to understand or even consider without cynicism.

What is described as a good attitude is part of good mental health, and traditionally, considering how much information about animal health and comfort that is continuously made available to the farming community, it is almost remarkable that techniques for maintaining good mental health has not been made more widely available to farmers.

Farmers are constantly challenged mentally. That's been a large part of the attraction of farming — it's never the same from day-to-day and demands awareness, clear thinking, creativeness and a positive attitude.

It also requires an ability to be open to reality, rather than blinded to concepts of desire.

For the past 10 years and still today, it seems that no one widely respected public leader has been able to provide the American public, especially the family farmer, with a clear vision of direction.

The Smiths and the Joneses have more, live better and work less than we do and we should be more like them to have self respect. Right?

Wrong. That's all a sham. We can not forget that the Smiths and the Joneses do not exist. If they appear to exist, who cares — most likely that apparition is a gimmic to stimulate product consumption.

What the Smiths and Joneses don't have is you and your family.

Those without some spiritual development, those whose past immediate family didn't possess or pass on good coping skills, and those convinced that singleness of direction, force and persistence are the only ways to achieve goals and achieving goals is the only way to achieve happiness are probably in need of a friend and maybe family.

Recently the saying, "Wherever you go, there you are," has become popular because of its ironic simplicity and seeming philosophical advice that where ever we are in life, that is what we have to deal with and if we can't find happiness in our situation, comfort in our family and God, then something should change.

Attitude.

With all the pressure on farmers to deal with volatile, uncertain markets, a political arena that rewards outlandishness and hate rather than knowledge, understanding and strength of character, and a growing general business ethic that can be described as "predatory capitalism (or canabalism)," it is understandable that frustration and cynicism have seeped into farm family relationships and operations.

People need people. Family members need each other. Farming is a business that can involve the family, but the success or failure of that business should not determine the success or failure of a family.

That's the difference attitude makes.

No matter what the circumstance, attitude makes the difference in whether there will be hope, love and companionship or misery, malaise and despair.

If the happiness of a family derived from love and respect doesn't come first, then what is a family farm?

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Manage Mastitis

Managing mastitis flare-ups has a lot of similarity to managing a hay mow fire, according to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent.

Think of subclinical mastitis as smoldering embers in a hay mow waiting for an opportunity to flare up. In the case of cows, these hot spots are the code 5 cows on your DHI SCC report.

These are the cows that keep your herd cell counts hanging in the 300,000 to 500,000 range. These cows will generally move one of two directions: up or down. As with sparks in the hay mow, all it takes is a little fanning to cause a flare-up.

With cows, this fanning may be in the form of added stresses placed on the cows such as other infections, injuries, changes in the weather, changes in the feeding program, milking system failure, changes in milking practices, discomfort, poor ventilation, etc. We need to focus on the clinical cases and get them under control or cull them from the herd.

At the same time, we need to vigorously seek out and attack the subclinical cases (code 5 cows) so they do not become tomorrow's flare-ups. When the number of subclinical cases is reduced, the job of managing the herd becomes much easier. Thus, it is very important to reduce the number of code 5 cows in the herd.

To Know Sow Nutrition

According to Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent, it is important that brood sows and gilts get the proper levels of nutrients for successful reproduction.

Feeding in excess is not only wasteful and costly but may increase embryonic mortality. A limited feeding system using balanced, fortified diets is recommended.

Individual feeding insures that each sow gets her daily requirements of nutrients without consuming excess energy. As a rule of thumb, four pounds of a balanced diet per day usually will provide adequate protein and energy.

During cold weather, additional feed may be required, depending on type of housing. Heavy milking breeds or females that are still growing will require more total nutrients. With limited feeding, it is extremely important that each sow gets her level of feed and no more.

The daily feeding of a limited amount to each individual is the most popular system. Its success is based on having an adequate number of feeding stalls or space for individual animals.

To Know Some Statistics

As agriculture prospers, so prospers the nation!

All of us depend upon food and fiber for substance. We also enjoy and expect a bountiful supply of high quality food at a very affordable prices.

Americans spend 11.4 percent of disposable income on food. The United States has 7 percent of the world's tillable land and produces 13 percent of the world's food. Food and fiber production accounts for 17 percent of our gross national product.

Less than 2 percent of the United States' population are farmers. Today's farmer feeds 129 other people.

The United States spends only two percent of its research and development budget on agricultural research and extension education programs. These monies indirectly help everyone, not just the two percent farmers.

This two percent compares to 54 percent spent on defense research and 44 percent on other civilian research.

Editor:

February 21, 1995 is definitely a night that I will always remember! Being the 1995-1996 New York State Dairy Princess was an incredible feeling and one that will always be close to my heart. I knew that moment would mark the beginning of a year full of excitement, hard work and lots of fun. I also knew that with a great amount of determination, enthusiasm, and many smiles, I would be able to make a difference in the lives of agricultural and non-agricultural people throughout our state.

Over the last twelve months, I have done my best to represent the farmers of New York State and the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) at numerous promotions. Many times, I have shared my children's presentation entitled "A Very Special Animal" to audiences young and old. I have had the opportunity to give speeches at several meetings such as the National All-

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN IS ENOUGH "ENOUGH"?

WHEN IS ENOUGH "ENOUGH"?

Background Scripture:
Matthew 18:21-35
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 4:25 to 5:2

Right after the Christmas holidays I made a surprising and baffling discovery: all of my shirts have unaccountably gotten tighter around my neck! I can get them buttoned, but sometimes only with a lot of effort.

That's the way the parables often affect me. I find these simple stories a kind of judgment on the ponderous ways in which I try to communicate the gospel of Christ. Jesus used simple stories to communicate what would probably evoke from me a wordy treatise.

Peter comes to Jesus with a problem that has probably troubled each of us at some time: "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? As many as seven times?"

SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN

I probably would have given Peter an answer in 10 or 11 good-sized paragraphs, but Jesus says simply, "I do not say to you seven times, but seventy times seven." Now some of us would to the math in our heads and exclaim, "Aha! we must forgive our brother 490 times!" Peter, of course, being from the Middle East, knew better than to interpret Jesus literally. In fact, not having much, if any schooling, Peter probably didn't know the product of seventy times seven. Jesus wasn't saying that he should forgive his brother 490 times and no more, but that forgiveness is beyond calculation.

The parable that follows confirms this, for Jesus is teaching us that we ourselves should forgive as often as we want God to forgive us. Since we don't want any limits on his forgiveness (Who among us could afford to take a risk such as that?" there should be none on ours either.

Unfortunately, this is one of the parables of Jesus that I can relate to all too well. When I look at my own status before God, I cannot entertain any thought of the endless mercy of God. If his forgiveness were limited to some particular number — like 49,000 — I'm sure I would already be over the limit. I have no illusions about how much I depend upon God's unlimited grace.

DO YOU HAVE ENOUGH?

At the same time, however, when I think of my role as the forgiver rather than the forgiven, the situation appears to be completely different. Then, like Peter, I tend to think that "seven times" is a lot of forgiveness for anyone to expect of me.

There have been a few people in my life, however, who have received from me at least seven forgivenesses and beyond that. So I find myself praying, "Lord, when is enough enough?" When can I stop forgiving?

And the answer which he gave to peter is the same one he gives to me: "It's enough if when you don't need any more forgiveness yourself." Of course, when is that? Never! So, what the king said to the unforgiving servant, God says to me: "You wicked servant! I forgave you all that debt because you besought me; and should you not have had mercy on your fellow servant, as I had mercy on you?" As George Herbert says, "He who cannot forgive breaks the bridte over which he himself must pass."

'When we ask God when we can stop forgiving others, the answer is always "Never."

Lancaster Dairy Days Provides Strategies For Better Dairying

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County Extension held two Dairy Day events the past two weeks providing speakers with strong programs for developing strategies for successful dairying.

The first program focused more on disease control while the second program, held Tuesday, mainly featured Dr. Gordon Jones, a Wisconsin veterinarian who has been mostly involved with dairy animals and operations similar to those in Lancaster County.

The main speakers for the first Dairy Day program, held February 27 were Dr. Victor Cortese, a managing technical services veterinarian with Pfizer Inc. who is well known for his expertise in bovine immunology, and Dr. Brian Reed, a local practicing dairy veterinarian with Agricultural Veterinary Associates in Manheim.

The message from Cortese was that dairy herds are all different and while a common theme should form the basis of vaccination programs and disease control, each farm is should have a tailored program, according to the veterinarians speaking at the first of two Lancaster County Dairy Day programs.

The challenge to dairy herd managers then is to develop a program in conjunction with a veterinarian that minimizes the introduction of disease and cost of fighting it, while at the same time protecting the herd.

Cortese explained the function and abilities of the immune system and how viruses and bacteria are recognized and battled by the different blood cells.

In general, Cortese advised feeding fresh colostrum immediately to a calf — a minimum of three quarts at the first feeding and an additional two quarts six to eight hours later.

He said he will use a stomach tube if the calf won't drink enough, but said he likes to stimulate the sucking response.

For those concerned about the volume of colostrum fed, Cortese said that a newborn Holstein calf has a stomach capacity for 2.5 gallons, so three quarts will not cause discomfort.

Further, by using fresh colostrum from an older herd cow, espeically one that has been vaccinated and has developed resistance to diseases on the farm, the calf will ge the benefit of the white blood cells in the colostrum, in addition to the antibodies.

He said studies have shown that the white blood cells in colostrum help regulate and enhance the calf's immune defense mechanism, giving it the best chance at survival.

The first thing Cortese said he suspects in cases of early scours in calves is a lack of good colostrum feeding.

The primary colostrum should be fresh, with refrigerated fresh second choice. He said it will keep for up to seven days refrigerated.

Freezing colostrum kills the white blood cells that give the calf so much benefit, he said. The antibodies survive freezing, but the white blood cells are very important in protecting the calf.

The reason he advised using colostrum from one of the older cows in the herd, rather than first-calf heifers, is because the older cows should have developed white blood cells and antibodies against existing herd diseases that the heifer may not have developed yet.

(This is especially true for those bringing springing heifers onto the farm, a practice he advised against if possible.)

He also advised against freezing the colostrum and heating it in a microwave because it destroys many of the beneficial aspects of colostrum.

He advised heating the refriger-

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Lebanon Sets Conservation Practices Tour

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Farm management practices ranging from manure storages to shallow water wetlands is the focus of a tour of farms scheduled for March 26 by the Lebanon County Conservation District.

The tour is to afford farmers, landowners, farm groups, local officials and interested citizens the opportunity to see first hand some existing and installed soil and water conservation practices and some sites where work is slated to be done.

Sponsored by the conservation district, an alternate date has been set for March 28 if inclement weather postpones the Tuesday March 26 tour.

The event is free of charge and a bown bag lunch is to be provided to those who register with the district prior to March 19. Call (717) 272-3377 to register.

Registrants are to meet at the Lebanon Valley Agriculture Center (located adjacent to the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds), and depart by bus at 9 a.m. Return is to be at 3 p.m.

Remain Flexible And Realize Profits With Grazing

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — In April 1992, David Forgey, columnist for Hoard's Dairyman and grass-based seasonal dairyman, began grazing his (now 150 cow) milking herd.

Since then, he's sold his TMR mixer and all the regular equipment used in conventional dairying and totally converted his farm to grazing.

Since then, he's not looked back. Instead, Forgey has converted lost time in hoof trimming, mastitis and calf scour treatment, trying to grow corn on muck land, and many other headaches to steady and sometimes substantial increases in profits.

How does he do it? He's spent about $7,000 to fence about 300 acres of his River-View Farm in Logansport, Ind., using rotational grazing to provide the feed and care his herd needs. All this amounts to more net profit, in the end, compared to conventional dairying.

Forgey spoke to about 200 dairy farmers (many of whom are already graziers) and agri-industry related representatives on Wednesday at the annual Pennsylvania Grazing Conference at The Embers in Carlisle.

Forgey spoke the first day of a two-day seminar at The Embers about how to begin a grazing program and make it work on a variety of farm enterprises.

The Cass County, Indiana dairyman is the third generation to manage a dairy on the farm. His farm sign reads, "All We Have We Owe To Udders." Along with his wife and one herdsman, Forgey maintains a herd of 150 head of Holstein cows and a DHIA rolling herd average between 18,000-20,000 pounds.

Forgey began using TMR in the early 1970s and has used a private nutritional consultant since 1980. The farm maintains not only herd production records but a complete laboratory analysis of both soils and forages.

In 1991, under his old dairy confinement system, net income per cow was only $152. In 1995, with 142 cows in the milking herd, Forgey posted a net profit per cow of $220. He indicated that net profits have increased to more than 20 percent of gross sales.

One of the reasons Forgey realized improved profits was that equipment repair was down. He also sold a lot of farm equipment he didn't need anymore. In 1995, with 142 cows, on the herd average he obtained 17,682 pounds of milk.

Because of the drought of 1988, coupled with devalued farm land in the 1980s, Forgey realized his operation was in trouble. He set out in 1991 to rotationally graze the heifers. After the terrible drought and the subsequent corn crops loss of 1991, Forgey began realizing how grazing could allow him to survive the summer without supplemental feed.

Forgey began grazing the milking herd in April 1992 and supplemented no additional forage until October of that year. They began to purchase a grain mix in one-inch pellet form containing about 18 percent crude protein (as a binding agent). The next year, they continued grazing, making additional feed adjustments, but using pastures with alfalfa/orchardgrass mixtures, and others with bromegrass, reeds canarygrass, fescue, bluegrass, and switchgrass. Soil types determine grass breaks.

To make the program work, Forgey maintains a flexible schedule. The key is to get the cows grazing early and avoid the stresses of the day.

The cows are milked at 1 a.m. and 1 p.m. The milking is early so "we can start grazing at sunrise," said Forgey. The grazing is finished by 8 a.m.-9 a.m. and the cows are brought back in from the midday summer sun. The important thing is to "get the stress of them and graze them before dark," said Forgey.

This provides a "more consistent milk flow," he said. "Time is critical in this to make the system work."

Forgey explained the layout of his farm, which uses a system of paddocks with water lines buried underneath. Each paddock measures about ¾ acre and is enclosed with single-strand high-tensile wire. Wiring is underground.

Forgey uses a "leader-follower" system. Starting from 8- to 10-inch plant size, the milking herd is allowed to graze the top 3- to 4-inches and then moved to another paddock. This is usually done in a 12-hour period so the cows go to a new paddock after each milking. The bred heifers are then allowed to graze for the next 12 hours and harvest the lesser-quality forage, which is very adequate for heifer growth and development.

Forgey believes it is important to leave about 3 inches of plant residue to allow for rapid regrowth. The calves are kept in a separate grazing system to provide improved early development.

Gradually, Forgey is adjusting to seasonal dairying. They transitioned the herd to March and April freshing and, with all the calves coming in a two-month period, can run them in one group all the way to freshening.

One successful approach is to feed calves milk in groups of 15 on barrels which have nipples attached to hoses which bring the milk up from the bottom. This seems to eliminate scours. Forgey indicated they have not had a case of scours in two years, raising about 75 calves each year.

This seasonal freshing system allows Forgey to dry the entire herd all at once and have an extended time to do routine maintenance to the milking facility.

Excess forage is harvested from paddocks in May, June, and July in the form of dry hay or round bale silage. The bales are triple-wrapped with 2-mil white plastic and stored outside where they are fed in the non-grazing months.

In April 1992, David Forgey, columnist for Hoard's Dairyman and grass-based seasonal dairyman, began grazing his (now 150 cow) milking herd. Since then, he's sold his TMR mixer and all the regular equipment used in conventional dairying and totally converted his farm to grazing.

In grazing, it is important to be careful about mixtures (not to combine red clover and grazing-type alfalfa). Also, grazing managers should periodically walk the fields to determine when pastures will be ready.

Grazing requires a greater deal of management than conventional, confinement dairying, according to the dairyman. But the rewards in more consistent milk production, less diseases, a healthier cow, and low input costs can pay off if done right.

On Wednesday at the two-day conference, other topics include presentations on what type of watering system is needed, fencing requirements, how to maintain paddocks and lanes, and other ways to "fine-tune" the entire grazing season, including hot season grazing and raising calves and beef on pasture.

Also, on Monday, Tom Calvert, sheep producer from Somerset County, was honored for his work with extension and SCS with the 1995 Pasture Management Specialist of the Year Honor. The award was formerly announced at the national meeting of the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS), formerly SCS, in Wichita, Kan. Bradford Dairy Days

"When you have a free screening, farmers will do it," said Evan. "Another issue we deal with is changing the behavior of the person."

Dermatologists recommend using a sun screen with UVA and UVB protection with an SPF of 15 or higher. Evans noted that you must read the label on the sun screen bottle to ensure you're getting both. After that, she said, you buy the least expensive one.

Other tips offered at Dairy Day included wearing a wide brimmed hat and considering the benefit of enclosed cabs or sun shades when purchasing equipment. Also people can learn to do a self exam and should see a doctor if he notices a change in size, shape and color of a mole, a sore that doesn't heal, or any new growth on the skin.

"When we're done with the screening, we connect the person with a dermatologist for treatment is we find any cancerous or precancerous lesions. Then we actually telephone the people to make sure they get the treatment," Evans said. "In six months we send out a questionnaire on behavior changes. We ask, 'Are you implementing the changes that were recommended?'"

In another program that centered on behavior, Thomas R. Maloney of the Department of Agricultural Economics, Cornell University, asked participants, "What's your leadership style?

"There are six main types of leadership styles," Maloney said. "Although you will recognize different styles in your own management, there is one style that will be your default style."

After asking farmers to fill out a questionnaire to determine their personal leadership style, Maloney explained that a default leadership style is the one that you most generally fall back on. He also commented on the strengths and weaknesses of each style.

The leadership styles include coercive, authoritative, affiliative, democratic, coaching or pace setting.

The coercive style is characterized by the "do it or else" attitude, Maloney stated. In the short term it is an efficient style, but generally, people don't like it and it may lead to a high turnover.

An authoritative leader is generally "firm but fair," noted Maloney. Although this too is an efficient leadership style where is it clear who is in charge, it may inhibit growth and development.

An affiliative leader likes to keep people happy with a "good buddy attitude," explained Maloney. These leaders help people to feel like they belong. However, productivity may be low and the decisions made may not be in the best interest of the organization.

"Let's vote," is the description of the democratic leader, according to Maloney. Under this leadership style, people own what they create and you get a lot of benefits from group input. However, it's time consuming and majority decisions aren't always in the best interest of the organization.

The coaching leader encourages growth and development and contributes to long-term productivity, however it is time consuming and the costs can be high if there is a great deal of turnover. Coaching leaders generally have assumed the "developer, delegator" role, according to Maloney.

The final leadership style is the pace setter. These people generally say, "Follow me," said Maloney. Although pace setting can be productive in the short term, especially if you have committed followers, it is a problem if people are unwilling to follow or if the pace setter is absent.

Stressing that there is no right leadership style all the time, Maloney explained that a mix of styles, depending on the people and the situation, is usually the best.

The Dairy Day program shifted gears for the afternoon program as Dr. Lawrence Muller, professor with Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, addressed the crowd on improving efficiency and the "bottom line."

"Unfortunately, lowering feed costs may be impossible in 1996," said Muller. "I try to remain upbeat and keep a good attitude. We have to do that if we're going to get through the rough times and hope-

N.E. Pa. Open Space Conference Set

WILKES-BARRE (Luzerne Co.) — An upcoming conference is to address new and creative ways to preserve and maintain community open spaces in northeastern Pennsylvania.

On Friday, March 22, "Creatung Opportunities for Community Open Space" will bring together local planners, conservation groups, developers, and natural resource professionals for a luncheon at noon, followed by an afternoon conference.

Award winning author, lecturer and rural town planner Mr. Randell Arendt of Natural Lands Trust Inc. will be returning to the area to discuss ways to develop a community-wide open space network and techniques that can improve the appearance and vitality of local downtowns.

Other presenters include Howard Grossman of the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania, discussing the newly formed Northeast Pennsylvania Conservancy; Steve Pitoniak of the Lackawanna County Regional Planning Commission explaining how the comprehensive plan for the Lackawanna Valley will try to preserve open space; Beth Pilling of the Montgomery County Planning Commission discussing the $10 million they are spending to preserve open space; and Bernie McGurl of the Lackawanna River corridor Association and Annette Schultzdiscussing the development of a 40-mile trail that will follow the river from Scranton to Carbondale.

"Creating Opportunities for Community Open Spcae" is to be held at the Holiday Inn in Dunmore from 12 p.m. until about 5 p.m. and include a buffet luncheon and a full packet of written material as part of the $15 registration fee.

This conference is sponsored by the Northeast Pennsylvania Community Tree Association in cooperation with the Lackawanna County Regional Planning Commission, Penn State Cooperative Extension, DCNR, Natural Lands Trust, the Pennsylvania Urban and Community Forestry Council, the Lackawanna River Corridor Association, Lackawanna County-Conservation District, and the U.S. EPA.

This project is supported by funds provided by the USDA Forest Service, Northeastern Areas, State and Private Forestry and with the assistance of the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry.

tully see some better times ahead."

During the course of his presentation, Muller offered ways to reduce costs and become more efficient producers of milk.

"The economic facts," Muller said, "are that milk prices have been stable until fairly recently, when we've seen some improvement. Our input costs are increasing. That means our margins are decreasing, which means for all of you the cost of living is a little bit tighter."

He suggested for future competitiveness, dairy farmers should look at ways to decrease costs.

Among other things, Muller noted that you could try to improve production management, improve business management, use the tools that are available for financial management, and use the tools and technology that are available, such as BST or intensive grazing.

"Many of you have heard of a fairly famous football coach at Penn State who says if you do the little things right, the big things will take care of themselves," Muller noted.

In gaining competitiveness, dairy farmers must better manage all the resources on the farm including land, labor, cattle and management.

"How can we better utilize those resources?" Muller asked.

Changes can also be considered in the feeding program especially by considering by-products, making sure you're feeding the best forage to the top producing cows, and reducing waste.

Other keys are to use DHIA records, test feed regularly and balance rations accordingly, use the scale carefully and analyze the mix when feeding a total mixed ration, and consider buying commodities in bulk.

Setting up an intensive grazing system is also a possibility for the coming months.

"I know some of your in this room are doing some grazing," said Muller. "Maybe some more of you are thinking about it. The feed costs are the biggest costs. Grazing systems are a component of the forage system. It does require different management and there's no guarantee that there will be a positive impact, but it's something to consider. Basically, intensive grazing is managing cows and pasture to optimize the production of both."

In addition to the main presentations, producers also had the opportunity to attend a breakout session on pesticides lead by County Extension Agent Mark Madden. One core and one category point were offered to those who listened to his two presentations, "What's new for 1996 in weed control materials?" and "Integrated pest management for corn."

The programs were well attended, according to Bradford County Ag. Agent Tom J. Maloney, who estimated attendance to be more than 300.

"It was a successful day," said Maloney. "We try to add something new every year. This year it was the skin cancer screening. Next year we'll try to have hearing screening. We try to get the whole family involved."

Berks Volunteers Offer Garden Seminars

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The first of four Berks County extension garden seminars, "Soil Testing - Does Your Soil Have What It Takes?", will be held March 21 at 7 p.m. at the River Road Recreation Building.

The seminars will be presented by Master Gardener Volunteers of the Berks County Extension Office of Penn State. The cost for the seminar will be $5.

Topics to be discussed include the importance of nutrients, pH, and soil testing, as well as how to read a soil test and fertilizer label.

Call the Muhlenberg Township Parks and Recreation Department at (610) 929-1503 to register.

Everyone is welcome, however the class size will be limited, and registration is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Jersey Inc., and DHIA about the importance of promoting our number one dairy industry and the products we produce. I judged teenage milkshakes at the New York City "Shake It Up With Milk" contest organized by ADADC, met Governor Pataki at the Empire Farm Days, and was crowned the Queen of Winter at the Got Milk Coronation Ice Show in Lake Placid. I found myself running as the milkman for the Olympic Torch "Run for '96" in Albany and Buffalo, dressing as an elf for "Santa's Milk and Cookie De-Stress Express" in Syracuse, and sporting a poodle skirt and letter sweater for the Dairylea Annual Meeting in Liverpool. Each event has had its own special memories, and I will forever cherish them in my heart.

As I have been working closely with the goal-oriented people at ADADC, I have learned that one of the most effective means of dairy promotion is the media. By getting our messages in the newspapers and on television and radio stations, we are able to reach more non-agricultural people. Events such as June Dairy Month, the unveiling of the butter sculpture, New York State Dairy Day and October Cheese Month have included interviews on top television stations in Syracuse and Utica, and radio stations in Oneida, Cortland, Homer and over 300 affiliate stations of Ag Radio Network across the Northeast. In addition, my alternates Tricia Hopkins, Anita Lant, and I have been working on getting publicity in newspapers in the Buffalo, Albany, and New York City markets.

Dairy promotion is something that each of us can do in our daily lives. I realize now that although milk stickers and cow costumes are fun and necessary ways to promote our products, we have to talk about our wholesome products to the consuming public and convince them to reach for that extra carton of milk or second brick of New York State cheese. Even though my reign as the New York State Dairy Princess comes to an end on Tuesday, February 20, I know that my job as a dairy promoter has just begun. We all can make a difference!

One of the pleasures of being a "REAL" Princess is that you have the opportunity to work with outstanding people! Promotion is a team effort, and I cannot say thank you enough to all that have made this year so special. Tricia and Anita are two very hard workers who have become two of my very special friends. I sincerely thank you for all that you have done! Thank you to all of the 1994 and 1995 Dairy Princesses, Maids, Ambassadors and county committees. Your efforts in your counties are making a difference every day!

I owe a lot of my success as the New York State Dairy Princess to Stephanie Meyers, producer communications specialist, who always works to make our promotions more effective. Rick Naczi, chief executive officer, and Beth Meyer, public relations specialist, and the rest of the ADADC staff have also been essential leaders. Whenever I had questions, these people were more than capable of finding the answer! Promotion is a team effort, and this team is an example to follow.

Without the love and support from my family and friends in Cortland County, this year could have never been so successful. My mom and dad, brothers, sisters and their families were always very encouraging and helpful. I love you all!

Of course, I would never have been able to have this experience if it wasn't for all of the wonderful dairy farmers in New York State! Being your representative throughout our beautiful Empire State has been an honor and a privilege for me. We are all definitely blessed with a New York State farm family that is full of compassion, hard work, dedication and loyalty. I am proud to have had the opportunity to represent this special group of people! Thank you and God bless you all!

Editor:

As Cambria County Dairy Princess, I would like to thank all the local and state farmers for their support in the past year. The opportunity to serve you, the producers and consumers of the dairy industry, has been an outstanding opportunity.

No other industry can have the satisfaction that the dairy farmers have. To walk into a store and see your product proudly displayed in the dairy cases should be a delight to all of us. To all of us, those products are not just some thing that comes off a production line. These products are the heart and soul of our industry. From start to finish, dairy products are a proud representation of the dairy industry. From the feed of our bountiful laborers to the 4 a.m. milking, products of our industry are totally produced on the farm.

It has been my delight to serve you as a proud representative of the dairy industry and I hope the people I have reached continue to use the most natural of all foods, Milk, and the products that come from them. With the help of the dairy farmers, the dairy industry will be sure to keep on thriving.

I wish to thank all of you who support the dairy industry and the dairy princess program in the past years and hope your generosity continuess in the years to come.

Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Calf Scheduled For April 27

FREDERICK, Md. — The 1996 Mid-Atlantic Brown Swiss Calf Sale is scheduled to be held 10:30 a.m., April 27 at the Frederick Fairgrounds in Frederick.

Consignments are still being accepted until March 22. Those wishing to consign a calf should call either Howard Fleming at (301) 475-3440, Harold Long at (301) 271-7577, or Cindy Warner at (301) 371-5206.

The March 22 deadline is necessary so that organizers can have time to publish a sale catalog in adequate time for buyers to review.

Pedigree information is requested as early as possible in order to promote and advertise the consigments properly.

The annual sale has developed a strong record for selling quality animals. Many have been developed into national show quality animals, state and national bell ringers, All-Americans, and profitable additions to many herds.

The sale has been a great place for purchasing 4-H project animals and has also provided some top-pedigreed calves for the merchandising and investment buyer.

Sale organizers have been seeking a strong group of calves that combine a unique blend of production and sound type.

Production
Type Sale

In related news, those who travel early for the calf sale can have an opportunity to attend the Mid-Atlantic Production and Type Sale, set for 7 p.m., April 26.

There are to be 25 to 30 young milking cows offered for sale that have strong type, pedigree, and production qualities. Many of the young cows are backed by All-American winners, Bell Ringer nominees and state production winners.

For more information on that sale, call Allen Bassler at (540) 592-3559.

Poultry Progress Days Examines Issues Affecting Industry

downward. If air seeps in too slowly, it condenses and causes caking of the litter. Achieving the proper amount of static pressure keeps litter drier.

Hulet cautioned farmers that ammonia, which is heavier than air, is greater at bird levels than at human levels. High ammonia levels cause respiratory problems and even blindness in birds.

While having an improper air circulation might seem inconsequential, two negative points greatly increases a bird's stress and magnifies diseases and other problems birds may contract. Hulet said that while having only one problem such as poor chick quality, immune incompetence, poor biosecurity in the house, and increase of ammonia and dust and chilling might mean only a two percent loss in birds, having a problem with two of these areas results in an average eight percent loss, and having problems in three of the areas results in a 16 percent loss.

"Have each factor at its best so that factors beyond your control are kept at a minimum," Hulet said.

In his presentation, Dr. Daniel Weinstock of Penn State challenged the audience to think of a chicken as a time bomb. "When it starts ticking, you start losing money," he said.

"The basic idea of a chick is to produce product; the enemy is stress," he said of the many different stresses that may affect poultry.

Weinstock demonstrated how chickens exposed to absence of food, water, and environmental changes react to the stress. The pituitary gland sends out a hormone that goes to adrenals and affects the entire body of the chicken. Corticosteroids cause an increase in consumption of food and water but a decrease gain that causes increased feces excretion and the liver to get bigger and heavier.

Although chickens can adapt to change, it costs the producer, according to Weinstock. Not only in food and water costs but also the litter will get wetter, which affects the environment and results in chickens not fighting off infections.

"A true poultry man can tell intuitively when a chicken is stressed," Weinstock said. When birds aren't stressed, they spread

Maryland Jersey Club Holds Convention, Honors Members

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

NEW MIDWAY, Md. — Jersey enthusiasts from around the state came together recently at the 75th annual meeting of the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club, held in New Midway at the Fire Hall.

This year marks the 77th year of organization for the club.

Boasting a record attendance of 117 people, this year's meeting was dedicated to the memory of Ken Van Sant, George Stiles, and Edward Staley.

Highlights of the meeting included the election of officers, a talk by guest speaker Dennis Schad from ADC co-op, awards presentations, and the crowning of a new state Jersey queen.

Mike Forsythe was elected as the new president of the club. Forsythe replaces outgoing president Duane Norman, who stepped down after four years. The vice president is Jimmy Stonesifer. Fern and Cindy Hines will continue to share the position of secretary/treasurer of the club.

Dennis Schad, manager of Regulatory Affairs at ADC, was on hand to offer some thoughts on Multiple Component Pricing (MCP). The possibility of consolidating Federal Orders, which would bring MCP into all federal orders, exists within the H.B. 2854, the Farm Bill currently before the House of Representatives.

Federal Order 4 implemented a MCP system based on solids-not-fat in January 1992. Schad said that F.O. 4 is unique in that relatively little cheese is processed in the order.

For example, in 1995, class 3 milk in F.O. 4 accounted for only 39 percent of milk. Of that 39 percent, about 66 percent went for powder, and 29 percent for cheese.

In a consolidated Order with Orders 1 and 2, neither of which currently use MCP, there will be more cheese. "It becomes a bigger issue," said Schad.

There are four or five component pricing ideas circulating currently. One possibility that Mr. Schad reported on was the idea of pricing milk based on what its components are worth to the buyer.

A powder processor, for example, who is interested only in powder, doesn't value protein or lactose.

A cheese producer, on the other hand, realizes an increased cheese yield with higher protein milk. The pool of money from the component prices based on protein and other solids could then be redistributed to the farmers differently.

Awards were presented for youth and seniors during the afternoon program.

The John Stiles Memorial Award is given each year to the youth who has contributed most significantly to the club in the past year. This year's winner is Mary Ellen Seraydian.

Mary Ellne, who has been very active in all aspects of the Jersey Cattle Club, is also the outgoing Maryland Jersey Queen. The award was presented by Heather Long.

The Dr. Hoopes Senior Award is presented to the senior Club member who has been most active in club activities during the preceding year. This year the winner is Fern Hines.

Known to the youth as the "Little Cow Lady," Fern has been very involved in club activities, especially giving a great deal of her time to the pre-4-H'ers. The award was presented by Mike Forsythe.

The Club as a very active youth membership, and record book awards for the 4-H'ers were part of the day's program.

Winners in each category for first, second, and third place, respectively, were: Junior Girls: Ashley Burdette, Heather Hines, Kim Holland; Junior Boys: Wade Downey, Chris Beachey, Daryl Hood; Intermediate Girls: Heather Long, Andrea Hood, Alicia Feuillet; Intermediate Boys: Ryan Downey, Andrew Covell, Adam Harvey; Senior Girls: Emily Birch, Amanda Holland, Abbey Fawley; Senior Boys: Christopher Davidson (no second or third place).

Scholarships for the top girl and boy in the amount of $100 went to Emily Birch and Ryan Downey.

The Landmark Genetics Award, given to the farm ranked highest in points for herd management, was awarded to Jim and Sharon Osborn, Queen-Acres Farm, of Keymar.

The Tri-State Breeders Cooperative Award, for the highest average total performance index for herd genetics, went to the late Mrs. Catherine Thomas, Windy Knoll Farm, Gaithersburg.

In production awards, the J. Hansen Hoffman Tropphy for the highest average for energy corrected milk was presented to Paul and Naomi Petersheim, of Oakland. The Junior award winner was Ryan Savage of Knoxville. Ryan is the son of Wayne and Cindee Savage.

The 1996 Maryland Jersey Queen was crowned at the banquet. She is Abby Fawley, of Jefferson. Abby is the daughter of Terry and Teresa Fawley. The family has a mixed herd of Holsteins and Jerseys, and currently milk a total of 30 cows.

Fern Hines receives the Dr. Hoopes Senior Award for her work with youth activities and involvement with the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club, where she is currently secretary/treasurer.

Abby Fawley accepts the title and a bouquet of flowers as 1996 Maryland Jersey queen.

harder and harder to be positive about farming. I think that's where a lot of dairy families are today, because it all leads back to the income that farmers are getting."

While doing all they can to cut costs, one item that has to remain is time away from the chores. To do so, a neighbor provides relief milking one weekend every month.

It is the conservation work that the Umbles completed during the years that ensured the well-being of the farm itself to future generations.

Ken and Marilyn Umble were honored recently by the Chester Conservation District for their work to install and maintain soil erosion control practices on their farm.

This is nothing new for the Umbles. Since the early 1950s, Ken's father, Harold, began putting in contour strips, which continued throughout the years, until Harold signed with the district in 1967.

In the 1970s, waterways were installed at the farm. In 1981, Ken and Marilyn purchased the animals and equipment. That same year, the Umbles installed a 185,000-gallon underground manure pit.

In 1987, the Umbles purchased the farm itself. Not too long after, in 1992, the Umbles signed a Chesapeake Bay contract to cost-share the construction of a eight- by 60-foot circular concrete manure storage structure.

In the spring of 1994, three streambank crossings were installed. Ken used concrete slatted slabs, measuring four by 16 feet, on a bed of stones, as streambank protective crossings. The slabs were once used in a hog confinement building.

That same year, Ken installed streambank fencing using regular single-strand, high tensile fence.

In all, many conservation improvements have been made to Glen Valley Farm, including 900 feet of grassed waterway, 32 acres of contour farming, 53 acres of controur strip cropping, and 58 acres of a planned grazing system. According to the district, 90 percent of the conservation plan is implemented.

Ken indicated that only 18 acres of contour strips are needed to be installed to complete the conservation plan.

Ken said he grows a total of 150 tillable acres, with 30 acres of no-till, some on rented ground. All told, he manages 85 acres of corn, 50 acres of alfalfa, and 30 acres of small grains double-cropped into soybeans.

The Umbles manage a dairy composed of 175 animals, out of which they are milking 83, all registered Holsteins, on TMR. Their latest DHIA records include 22,768 pounds of milk, 821 pounds of fat, and 733 pounds of protein. For their TMR, they work with a Cochranville nutritionist.

For Ken, it was important to get a good crop cover on soil with little residue, specifically acres devoted to corn silage. Also, contour and strip cropping has meant more planning and responsibility.

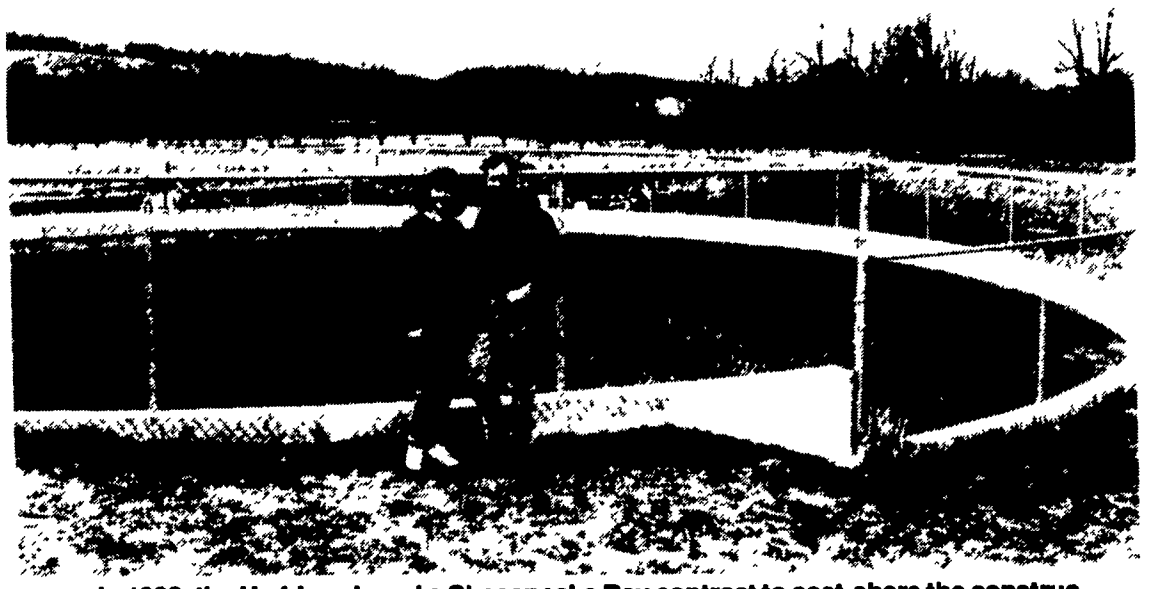
Some of those practices are time-consuming and often difficult, but Marilyn said that "we know in the long run it is the best thing to do. Money or not, it should be done," she said.

The purpose of conservation organizations is "not to make farming difficult, that's not why they're initiating some of these programs at all," she said. "It's to stop erosion and to keep your farm workable.

"It's for our children's benefit, too."

Ken admitted that many farmers would not be able to comply with the Bay Program unless money was available. Many dairies are too strapped financially to come up with extra money to install a manure structure or put in streambank crossings.

(Turn to Page A33)



In 1992, the Umbles signed a Chesapeake Bay contract to cost-share the construction of a eight- by 60-foot circular concrete manure storage structure.

Marilyn spoke about some of the positive things about working on a farm, such as learning a deep sense of responsibility. She told them, "I know you feel like you have too much. We all do sometimes, but you really will be better off."

ated colostrum in a hot water bath until it reaches a temperature of 101.5 to 102 degrees. That temperature is the body temperature of the calf and may seem warm to the touch, but it should help hasten the effect of the colostrum in the gut of the calf, where the antibodies are absorbed through the intestinal wall during the first 24 hours of life.

If the colostrum isn't given within this time frame, the calf could die because any bacteria that enter after that can destroy the intenstinal lining.

Natural feeding of the calf on the brood cow in the Holstein breed is generally not sufficient to provide adequate colostrum, Cortese said. According to the veterinarian and immunological expert, research has shown that 78 percent of Holstein calves allowed to calf naturally were deficient in colostrum. The result is unthrifty calves.

Studies also show that calves given good colostrum in the proper amounts at the right time exhibit greater growth and are generally a little larger as adults.

It is important to remember that the reason a calf needs colostrum is because the placenta is too thick for the mother cow's antibodies to get to the calf. However, some viruses can cross over into the calf and result in a calf that develops an immune system that doesn't recognize disease-causing viruses as foreign and can create a chronic carrier of disease.

Therefore, in fighting certain diseases, the only way to get them out of the herd is to keep them from being passed onto the next generation during gestation.

As far as vaccinations, both veterinarians said to follow the label directions on all but one vaccine — that for Lepto does not carry a booster recommendation, but they said to give a booster anyway.

The reason for booster shots is that the immune system has a primary and secondary response. The primary response is short-lived. The system develops antibodies to fight the foreign virus, bacteria or poison, but doesn't develop them continually if reinfection doesn't occur.

Lancaster Dairy Days Provides Strategies For Better Dairying

The booster vaccines with a modified live virus given at the proper time make the immune system develop antibodies for longer period, giving the animal extended protection.

It is important to understand that vaccinations are not magic cure-alls. The immunological health of the animal depends on the amount of additional stress, nutrition, aging, stage of development, steroids, and immunodefficiency diseases that it may have.

Stress in dairy cattle can be caused by a number of things, such as weather (Holsteins have a comfort range from -13 degrees to 78 degrees), nutrition, shipping, calving, dehorning, weaning, etc.

Stress affects the immune system deeply, not merely for a short time.

There are times when giving a vaccine to a cow is a waste of time, when her immune system is not responsive — two days pre-calving and 5 post-calving.

There are also times when giving vaccinations can be deadly or dangerous. In high heat, for example.

Dr. Cortese said that the Holstein breed is especially sensitive to vaccinations and he advised never giving a vaccination that contained more than two gram-negative bacteria vaccines at any one time.

He said negative reactions to vaccinations can occur from two hours to 24 hours after the fact.

While Cortese was very detailed and specific, his main advise was to design a system on the farm that stresses developing strong immunological systems in the cattle from birth until death and one that deals with the diseases on the farm or where the cattle are exposed.

Day II

Dr. Gordon Jones wasn't as specific in his discussion as he was in trying to get dairy farmers to reconceptualize what it is they are doing.

With a stuffed toy cow, Jones proved to be entertaining with certain stories illustrating how what we think we see or hear or know may not be true or real.

He said that dairy farmers have to realize that the dairy cow is the reason the dairy operation is in existance.

He said the very first dairy cows lived along the edge of glacier and that the very first farmers put up fences to keep the cows out of their gardens.

A relationship was developed between the cow and man, with the cow giving her milk, her calves, and ultimately her meat and body to the farmer in exchange for being taken care of.

Basically, the farmer has to understand her real needs.

Some of the things in the barn that are abnormal have been that way for so long that they now seem

What is normal and best is not always obvious anymore, he said.

The fact is that almost twice the amount of blood circulates through the bovine mammary system when a cow is lying down that when she is standing.

Taking that back one step, he said that after feeding for maintenance, the rest of feed goes toward milk production or is stored.

The most profitable amount of feed, therefore, to the dairyman, is the last amount that the cow eats. If the farmer can strive to get the cow to eat just a little bit more — such as desert after a Thanksgiving dinner — and then allow her to get her to lie down and rest as quickly as possible, the better the cow is going to be and the better off the farmer will be.

Dairylea To Host Legislative Breakfast

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. is sponsoring an informational breakfast for its farmer members and state-level legislators from the state of Pennsylvania on Tuesday, March 19.

The event will take place from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. at the State Capitol Building in Harrisburg.

Dairylea holds the breakfast annually to encourage members to become involved in policy making that affects their farming operations.

"This informal gathering provides an excellent opportunity for Dairylea members to meet one-on-one with their state legislators and discuss current dairy and agricultural issues important to the farming community,"said Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford.

"With the uncertainty of dairy policy, many questions and issues have been raised concerning the future role of government as it relates to the dairy industry. It is the presence of these issues and concerns that make this year's legislative breakfast more important than ever for our members."

Dairylea is a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with more than 2,500 member farms throughout the Northeast. It markets more that 4 billion pounds of milk annually and participates and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

Producers Get Apple Marketing Assessment Referendum

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius is urging apple growers to vote in a referendum to change the rate of assessment to growers under the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program.

The program promotes the sale of Pennsylvania-grown apples and apple products through advertising and sale displays, and by serving as the industry spokesperson.

"Pennsylvania ranks fifth nationally in apple production," Brosius said. "With increased resources, the Apple Marketing Program can work to enter new markets, including export markets."

The referendum proposes to change the rate of assessment beginning with the 1996-97 marketing season to 12 cents per bushel of apples sold for fresh market use and six cents per hundred pounds of apples sold or accepted for processing.

Beginning with the 2000-01 marketing season, the proposed rate of assessment would increase to 15 cents per bushel of apples sold for fresh market use and eight cents per hundred pounds of apples sold or accepted for processing.

The proposed amendment applies to all apple growers in the Commonwealth with five hundred or more apple trees of all ages.

The referendum period will begin on March 25, 1996, and will end at 4 p.m. on April 8, 1996.

Ballots may be mailed or delivered to the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Market Development, Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

Ballots will be sent to growers who were assessed through the program in 1995. For more information or to receive a ballot, contact the Bureau of Market Development, telephone (717) 787-2376.

Time Away From Chores

"I doubt if a lot of people would do everything the Bay Program wants you to do if there wasn't any cost-sharing, I'll put it that way," said Ken. "There are inconveniences. I, personally, really like the streambank fencing about as much as anything. That doesn't take a lot of time and it looks better, without the banks being constantly eroded by the cows."

The maintenance takes time, but using a sickle mower gets the job done about three times a year.

In the meantime, the whole family is busy with a lot of the dairy chores. On the refrigerator in the kitchen is a "chore schedule" that details milking times — and time off — for their children.

Marilyn remembered a time when she overheard a conversation her boys were having while stacking wood downstairs.

Marilyn recalled one of the boys

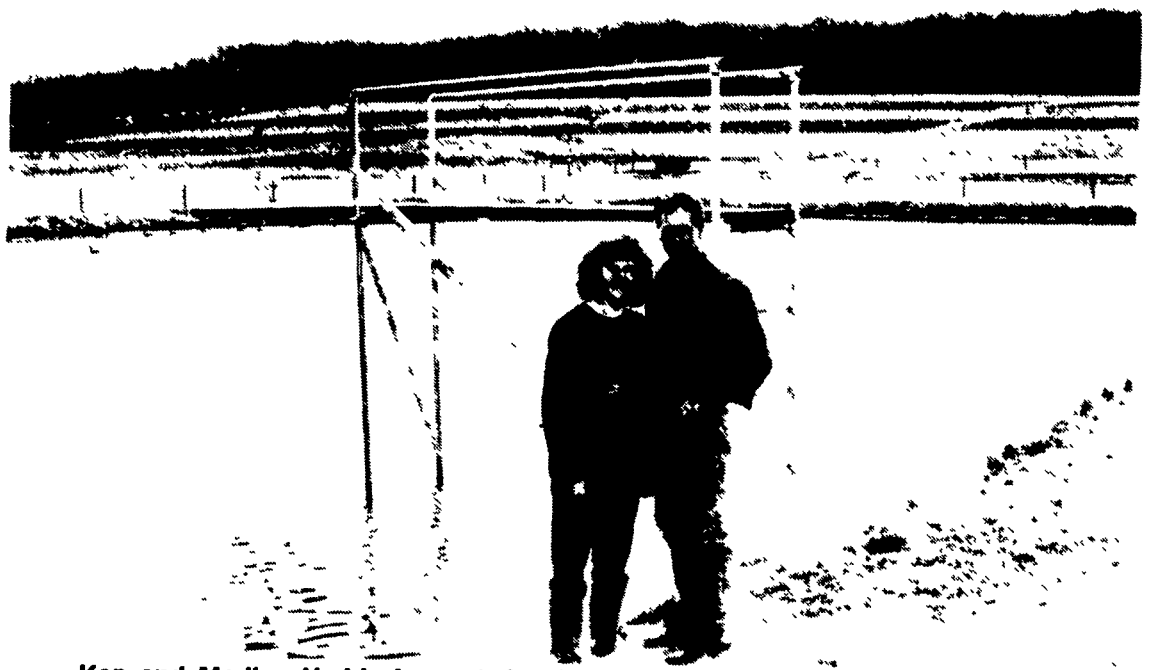
"I doubt if a lot of people would do everything the Bay Program wants you to do if there wasn't any cost-sharing, I'll put it that way," said Ken.

In the spring of 1994, three streambank crossings were installed. Ken used concrete slatted slabs, measuring four by 16 feet, on a bed of stones, as streambank protective crossings. The slabs were once used in a hog confinement building.



Ken and Marilyn Umble inspect the diving board in front of their farm pond.

Antique Apple Grafting Workshop At Landis Valley

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Landis Valley Museum and the Backyard Fruitgrowers will offer instruction in the historic skill of fruitwood grafting at the museum on Saturday, March 23 from 1-4:30 p.m.

The participants are encouraged to bring sticks of antique apple wood (scions) from a favorite apple tree or simply select from the over 75 available varieties that day.

The museum and the Backyard Fruitgrowers work together to preserve historic varieties of fruits used in the southcentral Pennsylvania region. Members of the fruitgrowers are dedicated to producing high-quality fruit in the backyard environment with little or no chemical spray.

Museum staff and fruitgrowers will conduct the grafting training as well as offer a slide presentation on historic varieties of fruit and fruit production.

The workshop is offered on a first-come, first-served basis. No reservation will be required for this meeting though there is a $15 fee.

For that price, participants will receive hands-on instruction in the craft of fruitwood grafting and two ready-to-plant apple trees. Call (717) 569-0401 Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. for further information.

Landis Valley Museum is located two miles north of Lancaster, on Route 272, called the Oregon Pike — a marked exit off both Route 30 and Route 222. Blizzard date for the event is March 30.

saying, "This is fun doing this, isn't it?"

Another replied, "Yeah, it's all right. I like to work hard, don't you?"

Then another answered, "When we grow up, because we're farm boys, we will know how to work hard."

Marilyn said, with a laugh, "that's about how I feel about farming. There are times when I'm just really enthusiastic about it and really like the lifestyle it brings, but the drudgery, day in and day out. . . ."

"It's just the day-to-day grind, and somebody has to be here every day," said Ken. "Twice a day the cows need milking, and it's every day."

Ken said that often his own children complain that their non-farm friends "don't have jobs do do when they come home from school."

Just last week, Marilyn sat down at the kitchen table with her children to discuss some of the frustrations of dairy farming.

Marilyn heard an earful. She spoke about some of the positive things about working on a farm, such as learning a deep sense of responsibility.

She told them, "I know you feel like you have too much. We all do sometimes, but you really will be better off."

On Sundays, the Umble children visit other families. Many times, the other families simply want to spend more time on the Umble farm, mainly because there are more things to do.

Guests of the Umbles can play with animals, such as rabbits and goats the kids raise, and have fun in the hay mow, the swimming pond, and shooting hoops.

Marilyn said, "Friends have to look for jobs to teach their kids responsibility, when you live in town."

She turned to Ken and asked, "Have we ever heard our children say that there is nothing to do, or what can I do?"

Ken replied, "I doubt it."

"I don't think I have ever heard that out of their mouths. If it's not work, then it's something fun that they put off because of work — whether it's reading, or playing basketball, or riding bike, or whatever. There's just no lack of something to do."

To develop a sense of perspective, Ken and Marilyn have decided that, in the years ahead, they want their children to take some time away from the farm.

Said Marilyn, "I think we would like to see them, whether it's a mission project, going to college, or holding another job, to step back from the farm and look at it objectively, and be able to choose farming because that's where they want to be."

Issues Affecting Industry

out, are not clumping and are active and alert. Stressed chickens are hunched, feathers are ruffled, the litter is wet, and the birds are not active and alert.

"Birds to not need to die to cause a poultry man great financial losses, because the result of stress goes to all cells of the chicken's body."

Weinstock stressed the importance of the Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory System (PADLS), which is designed to work closely with field investigation, research, and extension programs.

Laboratories at three sites (State Veterinary Diagnostic Labaratory in Harrisburg, the Animal Diagnost Laboratory of the Pennsylvania State University at State College and the New Bolton Center, the University of Pennsylvania at Kennett Square) provide full service diagnostics.

Dr. Armando Mirande of Intervet did double duty when he presented his planned speech on vaccine research and the presentation of Dr. Patty Dunn who could not make it to the seminar because of weather conditions.

Dunn faxed in her update on poultry disease and Mirande reported that it is a relatively calm year for respiratory problems in this area's chickens.

However, a new disease looms on the horizon. Six months ago, Mirande did not even know it existed, but outbreaks in South Africa and Europe show Ornithobacterum rhinotracheo (OR) as a bacteria that mainly attacks turkeys and broilers. It seems to cause litter damage by itself but makes other infections much worse.

Only one flock in Pennsylvania has been identified as having OR. "I don't want to alarm you, but be concerned if it starts spreading," Mirande said.

The outbreak of Avian Influenza in Mexico gave new insight into AI. They now know that the risk of migratory water fowl as carriers has been overestimated.

"I think you should be more concerned about ratites than water fowl as carriers," Mirande said of the free movement of ostriches and emus.

In his presentation on vaccine research, Mirande explained different methods for vaccine developement and how prices have dropped for vaccines in recent years.

Dr. David Kradel of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation reported on the importance of the Pa. Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP).

There are 235 flocks enrolled, making a total of 408 flocks since the inception of the program.

It is essential to become part of PEQAP because Salmonella enteritidis is not going away but increasing on the national level, Kradel said.

With lawsuits pending, Kradel said, "You do not want to be a producer with a traceback because you are not doing the maximum that can be done to reduce the risk of SE.

Barry Shaw of Wenger Feeds shared his research that confirms that the area is in a good position for a prosperous agricultural future.

The nearest competition in the poultry industry is New England, but higher feed costs, transportation crossover, and limited farmland prevents them from being a real threat. The Southeast has higher feed costs and caters more to southern markets. Although the Midwest has lower feed costs, that is their only advantage according to Shaw. Transportation costs reduce that feed advantage to less than two cents per dozen eggs.

Advantages are close proximity to markets, store door policy increasing in the area, financial institutions' commitment to agriculture, and the work ethic. He cited expansions by Tyson, Wampler-Longacre and the proposal of five new feed mills in the area has increasing confidence in the future of agriculture.

Pat Connors demonstrated the different respiratators available to protect poultry managers from dust.

Donald Robinson of the county conservation district reported on proposed nutrient management regulations.

He assured the poultry industry that they are far ahead of the general farm population with the act that will be implemented. The advisory board is working hard to assure that record keeping for nutrient management will be kept at a minimum and that cost sharing will be implemented. He encouraged the audience to participate in the public hearing on nutrient management slated for March 11 at the Farm and Home Center. Written testimony is encouraged.

Alan Strock of Penn State illuminated ways to maintain the family farm through estate planning.

About 180 people attended the seminar sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Lancaster County Poultry Association.

Northeast Dairy Conference

PITTSBURGH — Dairy company managers, leaders of farmer cooperatives, government officials, and university ag professors will be tackling issues affecting the future of the dairy industry here at the 1996 Northeast Dairy Conference March 24-26.

The theme is "Strategically Planning for the Future of the Dairy Industry."

Milk Marketing Inc. is hosting this year's conference, which will be held at the Sheraton Hotel - Station Square in downtown Pittsburgh.

"Over 200 farm leaders and dairy officials are expected to participate," said Anthony Schlesier, cooperative relations manager for Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI). He said anyone connected with the industry or with the news media who has not yet registered and is interested in attending may contact him at (800) 926-2667 ext. 319 or (800) 837-6776 ext. 7861.

On Monday, MMI President and Board Chairman Herman Brubaker will welcome participants and introduce the keynote speaker. The rest of the morning will focus on the topic, "Positioning the Dairy Industry for the Future Under Deregulation," with both cooperative and processor perspectives. Lunch will include a dairy legislation update. The afternoon will be devoted to a session on "National Federal Order Perspectives," a panel discussion on "Federal Order Issues and Merger Activities," and update on "U.S. and International Milk Promotion."

Tuesday morning will feature sessions on "Dairy Export Opportunities" and "How to Use Future Contracts" with the conference coming to a close by noon.

As I sit down to write this morning, the sun is shining and the temperature is to be in the 50s today. I'm looking at a large bouquet of forsythia that is blooming on our cherry drop-leaf table. It was only in the house a week before it bloomed. And, as I went to our mailbox, I saw a pair of beautiful bluebirds sitting on the bluebird nest that my husband made. Some wild geese flew noisily overhead too.

We attended the flower show in York the other week and saw many spring flowers. I bought several pots to put on my windowsills. Green plants are nice but I do appreciate those with flowers even more.

Allen has been concerned about his camper on Jacks' Mountain. I tease him and ask if he thinks that it ran away. So, we finally drove to Snyder County to check on it. Everything was fine and we only stayed a little bit.

A group from our church went to Homestead, Florida to help repair homes damaged by a hurricane two years ago. We saw slides of the progress they made by installing dry-wall and painting both inside and outside the houses. Not only did they help folks in Florida but they developed closer fellowship among themselves.

As you might expect there were frustrations along the way. Inspectors did not show up and so some jobs could not be completed. Some homes were empty while others were occupied.

When Allen and I were in Florida last winter, we saw some of the damaged houses. It is impossible to realize the plight of folks who lived in this area. Tragedy comes unexpectedly.

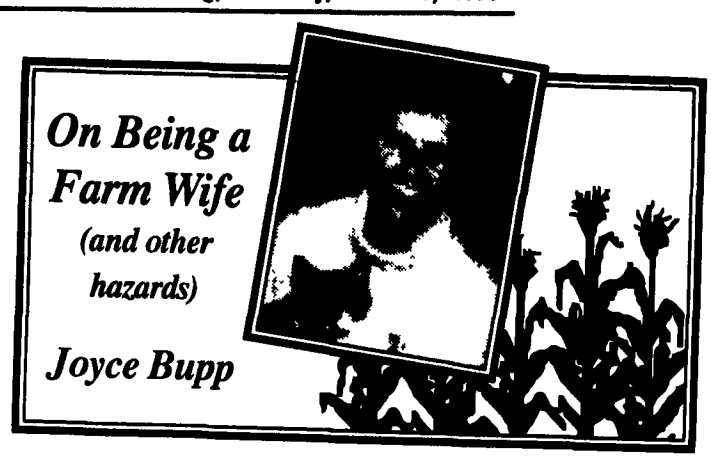
RED WING SHOES®
Made in U.S.A.



I lost a recipe.

This is a recipe used periodically over the past 20 or so years, and a favorite of the kids when they were home. We dubbed it Apple Dapple, a sort of apple crisp, but with a buttery, cake-like topping over the fruit, rather than an oatmeal or crumb topping.

Actually, all I wanted was the ingredient list for the topping part, to use on a peach crisp. Which I had originally intended to top with an oatmeal-crumb topping, except when I went for the oatmeal, there was none.

Obviously the morning was rapidly taking an unorganized turn here in my kitchen.

A second check and then a third through the "desserts" section of the recipe card file revealed the same stuff as before: microwave caramel corn, shortcake, cherry cheese pie, and the like.

I tried other sections, just in case. Not filed under "cookies." Nor in "cakes." T'wasn't behind the "pastries" divider, either. And just to be sure, I riffled through "meats," "candies," and "beverages." Even tried "pickles." But Apple Dapple was gone.

There was another possibility.

A few years ago, for Christmas, The Farmer gave me a magnetic-page photo album for filing all those loose recipes I had flying around and which I kept saying I wanted to put in a photo-file. So, now that's where they are — piled on a stack, inside the front cover of the album, handily kept atop the microwave oven. A quick flip through the snippets of paper and ragged-edged magazine pages revealed things like a bunny-shaped coconut cake and broccoli casseroles — but no Apple Dapple directions.

Though reluctant to face it, I knew there was yet another possibility.

The microwave sits on a corner counter, beneath more corner cupboards overhead. In the back of and around it lies a dark, forgotten "black hole" where stray recipes (and goodness knows what else, including an occasional trespassing mouse) accumulates behind the coffee maker and blender. I venture here on investigative expeditions only rarely and usually only out of desperation.

With a hopeful sigh, I started rooting. From behind the blender came a handful of recipe clippings. Dust. More crinkled clippings. A wooden paint stirrer. (A paint stirrer??) The glass cap to a spice jar. More clippings. No Apple Dapple.

Might as well go the whole way. I moved the microwave. More recipes for broccoli casseroles, impossible pies and two for refrigerated/frozen cucumber slaw that I'd searched for fruitlessly last July. Along with a rusted canning jar lid, two milk jug caps, one old penny, a tiny plastic cap which covers an adjusting screw on a set of binoculars . . . and a pair of contact lenses.

Honest. How the small, blue lenses in their slender case got there shall ever remain a mystery. A label on the back says "Bupp" — and I always get light blue ones because they're easier to see when crawling around the floor hunting a dropped one.

And still more recipes. Assorted ones for zucchini, varieties of muffins, another broccoli casserole. Plus a couple for shoofly pie (another favorite I lost years ago) and several for bar cookies I once had high hopes of trying.

I finally gave it up and threw together a topping based on a biscuit mix. The resulting peach cobbler was OK — not spectacular, but edible. Plus there's a lot of new inspiration for meals stirring around in my head. As well as renewed hope to get that photo-album of recipes organized, once and for all.

The Apple Dapple recipe remains unfound.

But spring housecleaning is wrapped up in at least one corner of the kitchen.

Farmers Learn Weed Control

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)—Ephrata Area Young Farmers monthly meeting was held recently at a supper meeting at Family Time restaurant. After the meal, Tara Toper, from Ciba, gave a helpful discussion on chemical use in weed control. Luke Burckhart, Pa Dept of Agriculture, presented a film which presented the proper approach to handling all aspects to be award of in the use of chemicals. Andy Bowen, from DowElanco, followed with information on the treatment of the three types of rootworm that have now become a problem in the area. Also, information was given on soybean weed control. Farmers received 2.2 credits for licensing.

In Pennsylvania, Linette Mertz Is Cream Of The Crop

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — The 380-acre Mertz farm in Berks County has been producing milk and top quality crops for about 70 years. But neither their Holsteins nor crops put this family farm in the spotlight. Instead it's daughter Linette who is cream of the crop among Pennsylvanians.

Petite and dark haired, Linette Mertz has dimples that flash as she talks about being crowned Miss Pennsylvania.

"Growing up on the farm was a wonderful experience," the 23-year-old said.

It was on the farm where she learned determination, dedication, and hard work. These same qualities were needed to obtain the state crown, she said.

Feeding cows and mowing fields were part of her childhood. Later, she studied at Kutztown University and after graduation landed a teaching job in her own backyard.

A third-grade elementary school teacher, Linette knew that she wanted to stay in teaching and also earn a master's degree. Back to school meant more money for studies.

As she pursued ideas for financing her education, she discovered that the Miss America program is the largest scholarship program in the world.

She decided to try for a bit of the $29 million awarded through the program.

Crowned Miss Susquehanna Valley, Linette went on to capture the Miss Pennsylvania crown and a $10,000 scholarship.

Linette is on leave of absence from her teaching job. As Miss Pennsylvania, she travels full time speaking to schools and organizations.

"The highlight of the Miss America Program was the pageant," Linette said of the 2½ weeks she spent with 49 of the the most talented and beautiful girls in the United States.

"It was like starting a new day of school;" Linette said of the excitement of pageant festivities.

After a short stay in Disney World, the contestants concentrated on interviews, talent and swimsuit competitions held in Atlantic City.

Linette found that judges were fascinated with her farming background and the impromtu questioning seem to center on growing up as a farmer's daughter.

Since Linette sings with a country band called Country Keys, she felt comfortable using her singing ability for the talent competition. She selected Reba McEntire's

Miss Pennsylvania and her parents, Raelyn and John Mertz, live on a 380-acre dairy farm.

Miss Pennsylvania Linette Mertz said that growing up on a farm taught her to be determined, dedicated, and a hard worker.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Roots Like A Tree

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

RAWLINSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "I have roots so deep, I feel like I'm a tree," Nancy Zimmerman said while discussing her family's farm in Rawlinsville.

"Most people grow up and leave their home, but I couldn't," Nancy said of the call of the wide open fields surrounding the home.

Nancy tried to leave the farm. She enrolled in West Chester College, but came home every weekend and eventually transferred to Millersville University to earn a master's degree in Spanish literature. She traveled and found there was no place like home. She married Clifford Clayton, taught Spanish, and lived in Reamstown, the northern end of the county, but still found herself returning home every weekend. Finally she and her husband built a house on the property so that Nancy could be surrounded by the fields that she loved.

"I'd love to get a Ph.D in literature, but I would need to leave the area," she said. Her career also has been limited by her refusal to move. But Nancy has no regrets. She loves the family farm, so much that she took steps to make sure that it always stayed in farming.

It is one of 64 farms preserved by Lancaster Farmland Trust.

When Nancy's parents purchased the farm in 1941, the 1700's log house had no electricity or plumbing.

Nancy said that according to a law put into effect during World War II, tenants could not be required to move when a home was sold. So Nancy's parents waited 4 or 5 years before they were able to take possession of the property.

It was an idyllic place in which to grow up. With no near neighbors and plenty of space to walk and dream.

Unknown to Nancy's family, a zoning change ruled the farm in a non-ag district.

"My nightmare was that I would wake up and find a Turkey Hill across the road," said Nancy, who became a crusader for farm land preservation. She first volunteered her time for Farmland Preservation and later became a board member.

Her father initiated the preservation of the farm, but passed away in 1989 before the plans were finalized. One year later, Nancy's mother died.

It was Nancy who pursued finalization of the plans.

In exchange for preserving the farm, a scholarship fund was set up for the couples two children, Elizabeth, 7, and Paul, 10.

A fervant supporter of ag preservation, Nancy believes that opponents don't understand the process or they wouldn't be against it. Again and again she explains to people that she did not sell the farm or trade it for the scholarships. Nothing has changed from before. It merely is a deed restriction that requires the farm to stay in agriculture. The result of preserving a farm is a tax benefit since the farm is appraised at a lower value than for development.

"A lot of people feel that the government will tell them what they can or cannot do if they preserve their farm land."

"But that isn't true. There is no government involvement," Nancy said. She continues to own the farm, which she leases to tenants.

In addition to Farmland Trust, the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board (LCAPB) also preserves farm land by using government funds. The two organizations work closely together.

The most important difference is that Farmland Trust depends upon all funding from individuals, businesses, and foundations. They do not accept any government funding — an important point for Amish and Mennonite farms who are leary of government involvement.

Another difference is that LCAPB receives funds from the county and state appropriated from a bond issue and cigarette taxes. Because the board purchases easements at full easement value, the average payment per acre preserved is $2,000. But the 8-10 year waiting list is a detriment. Farmland Trust has no waiting list and payment averages $140 per acre.

Of explaining the farmland preservation program, Nancy said, "It's a tough concept."

She considers Farmland Trust's most important mission "is to tell who we are."

She doesn't mind opposing viewpoints to the Farmland Preservation issue. But she wants the arguments to be based on fact and not on hearsy.

"If people are educated they can take an educated position."

Despite her passion for farmland preservation, Nancy said her number one interest is her children. "My kids are my true passion. I do this (farmland preservation) because I want my children to have a county to live in the way I did when I was little," she said. "The heritage of the past is the seed that brings forth the harvest of the future.

Nancy's husband has an antique restoration business in the barn. Nancy works in the Lancaster Social Security office where she is able to assist Spanish-speaking clientel.

Nancy Zimmerman Clayton, husband Clifford, and children, Elizabeth and Paul, are pleased to have the family farm preserved through Lancaster Farmland Trust, a private farmland preservation program.

When They Say "I'm Bored!"

A couple weeks ago, my husband and I hosted a sleep-over for some of our nieces and nephews. As I anticipated the arrival of these school-aged kids, I kept worrying ... "What if they're bored?" "What if they don't want to do the things we want to do?"

Well aunts and uncles can get away with lots of spoiling. We did. Within limits, we let them select the activities for the weekend — that guarantees the "Fun Factor" will increase! We did things that they chose, and we ate foods that they recommended. The adults decided "where," "when" and "for how long." It was a great weekend.

My favorite moments were usually unplanned things. One was playing word association games in the car — "four calling-birds," "four square," "rutabaga," etc. This activity lasted for at least 15 minutes in the car and filled space while we were waiting in line at several places. We found ourselves laughing a lot!

You can't always orchestrate fun moments like those, but parents, grandparents, and other adults should be prepared to suggest some free activities to kids who are "bored." The "I'm bored" complaint is most likely to come from a pre-school or school-aged child. Children run out of ideas after being in the same place for an extended period of time. They also may feel "bored" when they don't have people their age to interact with or when the place they are in lacks kid-friendly equipment.

All children need to learn to play by themselves. They also benefit from trying TV-free activities and physically demanding play ideas. To jump-start a child's thinking, suggest the following options:

Weave a berry basket — Take a plastic-grid berry/produce box. Dig out scraps of ribbon, yarn, and trim. Even fabric strips can be cut and woven around the basket. Weave the strips in and out of the spaces beginning at the bottom edge. Glue or tie the ends of ribbon to the basket or next strip. Continue around the sides of the basket until it is filled with color. Line basket with a paper napkin or construction paper. Use it to package a gift, serve rolls, or fill it for a centerpiece.

Letter search — For this activity, you'll need a printed place mat, newspaper article, or other item with lots of words on it that children can write on. Pick a letter (or word) and have the child search and circle it as many times as it appears.

Circle races — When you have a group of bored children, get them to sit or stand in a circle. Provide a ball, sponge, or other household equipment. Ask kids to think of challenges for the group, and have them time themselves to see how fast they can meet the challenge. For example, one person might suggest that the group pass a ball around the circle ten times with each person touching the ball once on each trip. How quickly can you do that? Then suggest that they do it with their eyes closed. Another person might challenge each person to walk, crab-style around the outside of the circle. What is the best collective time that they can achieve? Another might suggest that each person switch places with the person directly across from him while balancing the book on his head. Get creative!

Read/Search the Internet — Suggest that they explore another country, unusual animal, or famous person from another century and report back to you (no sooner than 20 minutes).

Crayon rubbings — Provide the child with several crayons and a blank piece of paper. Encourage her to go around the house or property and make crayon rubbings on interesting textures. Use different colors; fill as much space as possible on one side of the paper. Play a guessing game, trying to determine the source of each of the rubbings. Use the other side of the paper to write a note to a relative or friend in a distant town or state.

There are lots of things to do that don't cost money if children are bored. But let me caution, many children's lives today are already over-scheduled and rushed. It is perfectly okay to relax, hang out, and day dream. It's not only okay, it's healthy! Dr. David Elkind, author of The Hurried Child, says that it is good for children to be bored, because then they have to go into themselves for their own resources. As adults, be prepared to provide a few suggestions when a child comes asking for ideas. But be slow to step in and force activity. Also be slow to continually provide solutions. Let children take the lead as much as possible.

Cream Of The Crop

tune, "Why Haven't I Heard From You?"

"We sing in fire halls and fairs around the area," Linette said of the band.

Like each contestant, Linette needed to select a platform to promote during her reign.

Not surprisingly, this teacher chose literacy.

"Literacy is for everyone. Did you know that 60 million Americans cannot read or write?"

She started Project Life in Oley Valley where she lives and said, "I'm working on proclaiming an annual literacy day in Pennsylvania."

Wherever she goes, Linette encourages children to read and adults to read aloud to children.

"A child must learn the excitement or reading," she said.

Linette has an older sister Kim. Since Linette must have a chaperone with her at all times while traveling, her mother Raelyn often accompanies her. Raelyn is a hairdresser but doesn't mind postponing her work to act as a chaperone.

"It's quite an honor. We meet a lot of nice people," Raelyn said.

Her husband John and his brother take care of all the farming duties on the farm. John's dad had purchased the farm. After he died from a farming accident, John and his brother formed a partnership.

At the end of Linette's reign, she will return to teaching and work on a master's degree in elementary counseling.

Although she has enjoyed the glitz of being Miss Pennsylvania, Linette doesn't plan to change careers. She said, "Teaching is my first priority."

Those interested in booking Linette's band Country Keys, should call (610) 383-5136 or (610) 682-4414.

Linette autographs her picture during one of her many public appearances around the state. After her reign, Linette plans to return to teaching elementary students and pursue a master's degree in elementary counseling.

Enjoy The Variety Of Food Choices

Welcome to National Nutrition Month! The month of March is set aside by the American Dietetic Association to recognize the important role that nutrition plays in a healthy lifestyle. This year's theme, "Enjoy the Variety of Food Choices," celebrates that Americans have choices in not only what to eat, but where and how often. This freedom of food choices gives Americans the opportunity to have excellent, well-balanced diets, but it also presents us with confusing options.

Options such as the types of cuisine — Italian, Chinese, or Pennsylvania Dutch — are just the beginning of the choices. Next are the selections of the menu items. Wedged into these decisions are thoughts of cholesterol, sodium, and saturated fats. What is a nutrition-conscious person to do?

Nutrition experts have developed several "tools" to help Americans plan and select a healthy diet whether cooking at home or dining out.

One tool is the Food Guide Pyramid that is pictured on the labels of cereals, breads and many other food items. This tool emphasizes the variety of foods available to Americans by dividing foods into groups that have like characteristics. For example, breads, cereals, rice and pasta fall into the bottom group of the pyramid because they are excellent sources of carbohydrate, thiamin, riboflavin and iron. If these foods are made from whole wheat flour, they will also contribute fiber to one's diet. Other foods, such as tortillas, croissants, and English muffins may vary in vitamin and mineral content, but have carbohydrates as their major nutrient. Thus, they are in the same group.

A practical way to measure your diet plan to the Food Guide Pyramid is by using a daily food record. This month, record everything you eat and drink for a three or four-day period, especially noting the portion size. At the end of each day, count the number of servings from each group. Then compare it to the recommended number servings from each group on the Pyramid. You may be surprised how you rate! To help you in this assessment, the recommended numbers of servings are as follows:

Breads/Cereals/Rice/Pasta — 6 to 11 servings per day.
Serving size: 1 slice bread, ½ English muffin, ½ bagel, ½ cup cooked rice, pasta, or hot cereal, 1 ounce cold cereal.
Fruit — 2 to 3 servings per day.
Serving size: 1 medium fruit, ½ cup canned fruit, ¾ cup juice.
Vegetable — 3 to 4 servings per day.
Serving Size: ½ cup cooked or ¾ cup juice, 1 cup raw, leafy.
Milk, Yogurt, Cheese — 2 to 3 servings per day.
Serving Size: 1 cup milk or yogurt or 1½ ounces natural cheese.
Meat, Poultry, Fish, Dry Beans, Eggs, and Nuts — 2 to 3 servings per day.
Serving size: 2-3 ounces cooked meat, poultry, or fish, ½ cup cooked dry beans, 1 egg or 2 tablespoons of peanut butter count as 1 ounce of meat.

The last portion of the Food Guide Pyramid is not a group, but a section that represents other foods. In this section, foods made with fats and sugars may be found, such as cakes, pies, cookies, and candy. Fats lilke butter, margarine, oils, and salad dressings fall into this category, too. The recommendation for this section is to use these foods sparingly. That is, they should not be a major contributor of calories in your diet.

Another tool devised by nutrition experts is the Dietary Guidelines for Americans that were recently revised. The American Dietetic Association has provided suggestions for putting the guidelines into action. Here are practical ways to use the Guidelines on a daily basis:

- Eating a variety of foods and gradually incorporating new foods into your diet.
- Balancing food with physical activity and maintaining or improving weight. Start with small steps. Gradual changes go a long way toward healthy lifelong habits.
- Choosing a diet low in fat and cholesterol. Again, take small steps. One way is to go back to the Pyramid and choose foods in the same group with less fat.
- Using sugars in moderation.

The American Dietetic Association advises Americans to read food labels and become familiar with the Food Guide Pyramid.

- Eating plenty of grain products, vegetables, and fruits.

The American Dietetic Association suggests thinking of the food plate as a pie shape, with 75 percent made up of fruits, vegetables, and grains.

For a complete copy of the Food Guide Pyramid or the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, contact your county cooperative extension office. Also look for the American Dietetic Association's newest consumer publication available in most major bookstores. Cut the Fat!, written by a volunteer task force of 12 ADA members and published by HarperPerennial, contains simple, low-fat recipes and more than 500 practical tips for reducing dietary fat. Tips are organized by the setting — At The Grocery Store, At Home, Eating Out, On the Go, and Entertaining. The book costs $6.50 and is pocket-size, so it's portable and easy to use in any situation.

The difference is the shape of the feeder's trough (at right). ULTRAFLO II's higher trough lip reduces feed waste by keeping it in the trough and not on the floor or in the pit.

ULTRAFLO II offers you even greater reliability, durability, and outstanding feed-saving performance—up to 1 gram of feed per bird per day—over the original ULTRAFLO. And even the original ULTRAFLO was beating our competitors in feed savings!

So, join the cage feeding leader. Contact us today. Find out how Chore-Time and ULTRAFLO II can help you be a leader, too!

Nutty Recipes

Peanuts, almonds, walnuts, and other nuts are frequently referred to as "nutrition in a nutshell."

In addition to high food energy, nuts provide distinctive taste and texture that enrich many dishes. Or, eat them all by themselves.

Technically, nuts are seeds, full of concentrated vegetable protein and significant amounts of riboflavin and vitamin E.

Whenever you need a little crunch, exciting flavor, eye or appetite appeal, thing about nuts. Many varieties can easily be interchanged in recipes and add subtle variety to your menu.

It's amazing that when using the same basic ingredients, chicken corn soup can vary so much in flavor and appearance. A few seasonings and a touch of coloring can make all the difference in taste.

Today's featured recipe was tasted at a local farm sale. From the looks of hundreds slurping down the soup, it was apparent that this chicken corn soup was a tasty hit. The soup was made and served by the Weaverland Youth Group.

CHICKEN CORN SOUP

1½ quarts broth
1½ quarts chopped cooked chicken
Water to fill about ⅔ full a 16-quart kettle
2-3 tablespoons chicken base
2 good pinches saffron
2 heaping tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1 heaping tablespoon parsley. flakes
1 heaping tablespoon dried onion flakes
Yellow food coloring (for desired color)
3 pounds noodles
4 15-ounce cans corn

Boil water. Add noodles and remaining ingredients. Cook until noodles are soft. If needed, add more water to fill kettle.

'That Milk Thing' Campaigns To Increase Milk Sales Among Children

TOWSON, MD — Mid-Atlantic school children and their parents are getting the good news about milk in a new way — a big, blue, furry way. "That Milk Thing," a captivating and entertaining children's character, is the dairy industry's new mascot created by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA).

The MAMMA milk mascot is campaigning for increased milk sales in elementary schools and on television. The 1996 television spots are running on selected family-oriented shows. "That Milk Thing" is the cornerstone of MAMMA's Kids Marketing Program, an extensive promotion effort aimed at youngsters, ages 6-11 years old. The program, which has been in development for the past three years, has one goal — to persuade children to make milk their beverage of choice, both in school and at home.

The entertaining character has already achieved some success enhancing milk consumption among many youngsters. On the pilot tour of several schools in Baltimore and in Philadelphia, "That Milk Thing" helped to increase school breakfast participating by as much as 52 percent.

During an in-school assembly, the mascot performs an exciting and entertaining skit to teach children the importance of drinking milk, eating breakfast and getting a good education. The music, the sound effects and comedy make it fun for the children to learn how eating a good school breakfast improves their ability to learn.

"That Milk Thing" has just completed a successful school tour of Baltimore City schools and is embarkig on a 30-school tour for the School District of Philadelphia. More than 60,000 children in Baltimore City are participating in MAMMA's "I Love Milk" contest. The more than 112,000 students in the School District of Philadelphia are taking part in their third annual "I Love Milk at Breakfast" promotion in that school district.

What began several years ago with school assemblies sponsored by MAMMA, has evolved into a massive campaign to reach kids and their gatekeepers. Gatekeepers include parents, teachers, principals, and school food service staff. These adults are an important audience for MAMMA because they determine what beverages are made available to children. Persuading these adults to purchase milk is essential to the success of MAMMA's Kids Marketing Program.

MAMMA's dairy farmer board of directors recently approved the following program elements for 1996: television advertising aimed at children and gatekeepers; Public Service Announcements to publicize school meal programs; "I Love Milk" school contests; milk mascot school assemblies; Milk School Seminars for cafateria employees; in-school promotional materials; partnerships with corporations; and milk-friendly educational videos for school children.

MAMMA, the regional affiliate of Dairy Management, Inc., is the non-profit dairy promotion and marketing organization funded by more than 5,000 dairy farm family members in the Mid-Atlantic area.

"That Milk Thing," the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association's new milk mascot, makes learning about nutrition exciting. Recently, some Baltimore elementary school students learned about the importance of eating a healthy breakfast everyday — a healthy breakfast always includes milk.

He's big, he's blue, and he's lovable. The zany new milk mascot uses music and song in a hilarious show created to build school children's enthusiasm for drinking milk, eating breakfast and getting a good education. MAMMA's new television commercials featuring "That Milk Thing" are now airing on selected family-oriented shows.

How do migrating birds find their way?
It's a sure sign of spring! Birds are flying North after their wintertime vacation in sunny, Southern climates.
Our bird specialist friends (called ornithologists; say OR-ni-thawl-eh-jests) say these traveling flocks find their way South by instinct. They also know to leave at the right time so that there's plenty of food and good weather back at their summer homes where they were hatched — and where their new babies will be hatched.
There's one mystery, though — scientists aren't completely sure how birds find their way year after year. Most ornithologists think it's a combination of things. They know birds use the sun and stars to navigate (think of the sun and stars as a bird's roadmap), because when it's overcast, birds sometimes become disoriented and get lost.
Because the sun is in different positions at the same time of day at different spots on the Earth, scientists think birds also have an internal clock. (Birds don't need a watch to tell them it's 11 a.m.) So when the sun is in a certain spot at a certain time, birds use their internal clock to know which direction to fly. Birds follow the magnetic pull of the Earth, too. And when they get really close, some birds find their home nest by visual landmarks like rivers or buildings.
But however birds find their way, their homecomings mean winter is almost over!

Growing Plants Indoors

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The trick to raising healthy house plants is to give them the same thing that the natural environment offers.

According to Ginger Pryor, horticultural specialist, if a plant originated from the desert, it needs intense light and little water. Plants with a rain forest background need low light or shade.

"Think about where the plant grows naturally and try to imitate it," Pryor said in a recent workshop held at the Lebanon County Agriculture Center.

Light

All plants need light, water, and air. Even if a plant requires low light, it needs enough natural light equivalent to being able to read in that spot during the daytime.

"If you must turn the lights on to read during the day time, then it is not enough natural light," she said.

A plant in too low light stretches to reach the light and will become "leggy."

To intensify the light, plants may be set on mirrors for reflective light. Fluorescent lights work fine for green plants but not for flowering plants.

If artificial light is used, the plant needs double the light of natural light.

While east and south windows are often preferred by plant growers, north windows work fine. Windows that face the west sometimes become too hot on summer afternoons.

Plants do better in a humid area. Occasionally plants should be put in the shower to remove dust from the leaves.

Soil

Plants should be planted in potting soil. Pryor finds that adding parlite works better than vermiculite. Some people prefer to use soil from the garden, but remember, garden soil must be sterilized.

Bake in an oven at 145 degrees for 45 minutes. The best combination is one part soil to one part peat moss and one part parlite or vermiculite.

Water

While people are inclined to believe that plants are always thirsty, Ginger said, "The number one cause of plant death is overwatering."

When plants start dying from the bottom, it's an indicator of too much water.

If it wilts from the top or has crispy spots on the leaves, it does not have enough water.

Brown tips are the sign of low humidity.

Fertilizer

Plants that are transplanted into potting soil do not need to be fertilized during the first year, but after that they must be fed. An organic fish fertilizer works best for green plants. Look for balanced nutrients of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium or a 5-10-5 mixture.

Ginger Pryor, horticultural specialist for Lebanon County Extension, talks about raising healthy house plants.

Insects and Diseases

Some common pests that live in houseplants are aphids, spider mites, white flies, scales, and mealybugs.

To rid the plant of insects, Pryor recommends Safer's Insecticidal soap. Or dilute one-tablespoon alcohol in one-quart water and spray three applications 10 to 12 days apart.

Inspect plants carefully to determine the care needed.

Aphids are ⅛ -inch long and are usually green. Some have wings and may be darker. They cluster on leaves or stems, especially on the soft young plant tip. Aphids suck on plant sap, causing leaves to pale, curl, and die. They leave a sticky substance on leaves where they feed.

Wipe off and crush any aphids that can be seen. Carefully wash the foliage using a cotton swab and warm soapy water. Rinse the foliage using a sprayer or mister

These Cookbooks Make Dinner Bells Ring

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Fourteen printings and 39,000 copies later, "Dinner Bell" cookbooks have enchanced "good down home cooking" in Lancaster County.

Today many organizations and church groups publish cookbooks, but in 1971, 20 members of Society 22 thought long and hard about printing their first 240-page cookbook called "Dinner Bell." They gingerly took that first step in having 1,000 copies printed.

In no time at all the cookbooks sold out, and the Society issued another printing . . . another . . . and another . . . until they had 14 printings and 20,000 copies.

But long before that final printing, members already had compiled a second cookbook, "The Dinner Bell Rings Again!", filled with 250 pages of new recipes. This cookbook also had successive printings for a total of 13,000 copies.

Still, the members had plenty of tasty unpublished recipes so they printed "The Dinner Bell Encore."

All three cookbooks remain in print and are for sale. The most popular of the three cookbooks seems to be the first edition, "Dinner Bell," which includes many recipes handed down from generation to generation as well as some timely favorites.

After three cookbooks, members know exactly how to organize the process so that everything runs smoothly. Their method required Society members to submit 10 recipes in different categories.

Duplicate recipes were weeded out before member Claire Hess typed each one. She always used a typewriter instead of a word processor. After typing, members proofed their own recipes. Member Nancy Witmer drew the cover picture on the first cookbook and members drew inside illustrations. Later, artist Rosemary Ranck, daughter of a member, drew the cover picture and illustrations. After the printer returned the pages, Ann operated the book's hole puncher, and all 240 pages were spread out on long tables where members worked for days collating the books.

Publishing the cookbook has become a bit easier over the years. In the beginning, members collated the pages themselves and used a punch to insert holes for the plastic spiral-bound cookbooks.

In succeeding editions, the printer invested in an electric hole puncher and the pages were collated automatically. Ann worked long and hard to cross-reference the index in the third cookbook instead of listing recipes under categories such as dessert, meats, meat casseroles and seafood.

Although it sounds like a lot of hard work, members say they had lots of fun.

"We'd be putting the pages together and we'd get so hungry reading the recipes that we'd go home and cook up a storm," Nancy said.

"It really brought our group closer together because we spent so much time together," said Claire.

"We laughed a lot, although now I don't remember exactly why," said Ann, who, like most of the members, had young children at home during the first printings. Those children are now married and have children of their own.

Since Farm Women is a nonprofit organization, all proceeds have gone for charitable causes. Members do not know exactly how much has been distributed to the many causes they supported but it's a hefty amount for 22 women. Some of the causes include sponsoring children in third-world countries, the 4-H riding program for the handicapped, victims of cancer, fire, and extended hospital stays, scholarships for local students, and other community needs.

Society 22 is one of 28 Farm Women societies in the county. Membership totals 3,016 throughout the state. The organization was founded in 1914 to contribute to the power and influence of the farm home; to contribute to the community activity of farm women; to develop leadership and to promote better living and working conditions in the farm homes.

The cookbooks have been mailed to every state in the Union, and to Canada, Europe, and South America.

Society members are holding an overstock sale — $7 each or a set of three for $20, which includes postage and handling.

"This is a great bargain because the cookbooks sell for $10.50 in local shops," said Ann Diller.

For cookbooks, send a check made out to Society of Farm Women #22 and send to Mrs. Paul A. Witmer, 447 North George St., Millersville, PA 17551. Please specify which cookbook you are ordering or if you want all three. Make sure you include your name and complete address.

Nancy Witmer, Ann Diller, and Claire Hess talk about the three cookbooks published by Farm Women Society 22. The profits provide thousands of dollars for charitable causes.

Here is a sampling of recipes taken from the three cookbooks.

On Being A Long-Distance Grandparent

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Grandparents are very important to their families. Even if you live miles away, you can be a source of comfort and stability to your grandchildren. Here are a few ways to spice up your relationship with grandchildren who live at a distance.

1. Send postcards and letters. Young children especially love colorful picture postcards. When you write letters, send pictures of yourself, your pets, scenes from a trip, or pictures of the child from a previous visit. You can also sprinkle your correspondence with trivia questions and riddles.

2. Send audio or video cassette tapes. The children can play them over and over again and a taped "letter" is easier for a young child to understand than a written one. Young children can reply with their own tape. Ask the parents to interview the child on tape. The child might also play a piece recently mastered on a musical instrument.

3. Use phone calls for special occasions, if you need to watch your budget. Sometimes events that are occasional, rather than regular, take on special significance.

4. Invite one grandchild to visit at a time. It prevents sibling rivalry and will help assure a relaxed time for both of you. Limit the first visit to no more than a week, in case of homesickness. Before the visit, make some plans with the child, by letter or phone. Plan something special to do early in the visit: a trip to a museum, an amusement park, or a fishing spot. Teach a grandchild how to embroider, use tools, make a favorite recipe, or plant a garden. If possible, arrange time for play with other children.

5. Take a trip together. Go to a lake, a state park, hsitoric places, or stay at a motel with a swimming pool. Be guided by the child's age and changing interests.

To be important to your grandchild, you don't need everyday contact. You can maintain emotional contact from a distance. And when you're together, they thrive on the undivided attention you can give, the unconditional love that grandparents are so good at providing, and the opportunity to learn new things about this interesting world.

filled with clear water to remove any remaining aphids.

Adult whiteflies are tiny, white insects that flutter off leaves when a plant is disturbed. The green nymphs hatch from eggs and live under the leaves. They feed on plant sap, causing foliage to turn pale. Wash the leaves with soapy water.

Scales are brownish, oval insects with a shell-like covering over the entire body. They are usually found under leaves, on stems, and main leaf veins. Gently rub scales off leaves, then rinse the plant in warm, soapy water.

Mealybugs are soft-bodied sucking insects that appear as small cotton balls. They cluster under leaves and in crevices where leaf stems or branches join the main stem of the plant. They secrete honeydew on which black mold grows and will stunt and kill plants. Dab mealy bugs with a cotton swap dipped in rubbing alcohol. Rinse with warm soapy water.

Mites are almost invisible to the eye. They usually live on the undersides of leaves and spin delicate webs. When large numbers of them are present, their webs make a plant's foliage appear dusty. They suck the plant's juices, causing its leaves to become yellow or bronze and to fall off. A large number of mites can cause dwarfed leaves. Treat a mite infestation the same way as aphids.

Transplanting

When plants are root bound, they must be transplanted. Use pots that are only two-inches larger than the original. A combination of plants may be combined in one pot, but make sure plants with the same requirements of light and water and placed together.

Wet potting soil with warm water before putting plants in the new pot. Press down soil to prevent air pockets. Insert plants in pot one-inch lower than lip of pot. Cover only even to plant line, not higher.

When changing the location of plants, a gradual change of light must be made. Otherwise, taking a plant from low inside light to outside is too much a shock on the plant's system.

African Violets

African violets are one of America's most popular blooming house plant.

Ample light is the single most important requirement for a good bloom. A bright window sill is best in fall and in winter. Pryor recommends using fertilizer with high amounts of phosphorus such as 12-36-14. Fertilize from April through September. The plant goes into a dormant stage during the winter months.

Pryor does not recommend fertilizer sticks because roots often die from fertilizer burn in the area where the sticks are inserted.

Water in moderate supply is important. African violets are most conveniently watered from below by adding water to the saucers or tray. Water should be used completely before more water is added.

Information on house plant care and propagation is available free from county extension offices.

Dairy Promoters Recognized

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Ruth Strong of Barton, New York, and Mary Jane Burkert of Oriskany Falls, New York, were awarded the "Golden Cow Award" by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC), at the New York State Dairy Princess Pageant on Tuesday, February 20, at the Four Points Hotel by Sheraton, Liverpool, New York. The annual award is presented to two volunteers in New York State who have made significant contributions to local dairy promotion committees.

Strong has been an active member of the Tioga County Dairy Promotion Committee for over 15 years. Since 1984, she has served as the committee chairperson and contestant chairperson. She has served as banquet chairperson for eight years, and booking chairperson for two years. In addition to her leadership skills, Strong is most appreciated for her creative ideas for promoting milk and dairy products to high school students. Outside of dairy promotion, Strong serves as president of the Tioga Central School Booster Club, and is an active member of the Newark Valley Baptist Church. She is a cooperative extension member, a former 4-H Dairy Club leader, and a Tioga County board member of the former Farmers Home Administration.

Strong operates an 850-acre, 200-Holstein farm with her husband, Bob, and two sons. Her farm responsibilities include bookkeeping, calf raising, and serving as the official "chore lady." One of their two daughters is a former Tioga County Dairy Princess. In addition to her five grandchildren, her hobbies include raising collie puppies, sewing, and rock gardening.

Burkert, from Oneida County, is an active promotion member of 11 years. She served four of those years as treasurer and one year as booking chairperson, while her daughter, Barb, served as the county dairy princess. In addition, she has been instrumental in training new promoters, coordinating the county pageant, and implementing successful fund-raisers. Since 1989, Burkert has coordinated the Oneida County Fair booth, and has been an integral part of all promotion activities of the committee.

Outside of dairy promotion, Burkert currently serves as a leader for the Oneida County 4-H Dairy Club. In addition, she is a member of the New York State Holstein Association, the Oneida County Holstein Club, and volunteers for the junior county club. Through the National FFA, her family has hosted foreign exchange students from Germany and Costa Rica. She and her husband, Kenneth, own and operate a 900-acre, 500-Holstein dairy farm. In her free time, Burkert enjoys bowling and spending time with her three daughters, one son, and new granddaughter.

"On behalf of ADADC, I am very honored to recognize the dairy promotional efforts of Ruth Strong and Mary Jane Burkert," said Producer Communications Specialist Stephanie Meyers as she presented their awards. "They have served the dairy farmers in Tioga and Oneida counties well."

AAS Winners

I enjoy using "All Gardens great and small" to introduce new flower varieties. Here's four winners in 1996.

For 1996 All American Selections (AAS) introduced three new flower varieties as AAS Winners. These varieties include two petunias: 'Fantasy Pink Morn' and 'Heavenly Lavender,' and a salvia called 'Strata.'

They have proven their superior qualities at 60 flower trail gardens across the country. Seed of these AAS Winners are available from your favorite seed source.

Petunia Fantasy Pink Morn begins a new class of petunias. With many small blooms, Fantasy Pink Morn petunia is about two-thirds the size of a normal petunia. Flowers are 1 to 1¼ inches.

This new plant size adapts well in containers and fits into smaller garden spaces. The compact habit means no pinching or pruning. These petunia plants have continuous pink flowering, shading to creamy white at the center.

Another AAS winner, Petunia Heavenly Lavender has old fashioned double flowers. A good bloomer, Heavenly Lavender has large 2½ to 3 inch blooms to admire all season.

At one AAS trial site, a visitor suggested it should be called "triple" rather than double flowered because of the number of petals. The pure lavender flower color is unique for all other petunia varieties.

In the garden, Heavenly Lavender performs best in a full sun location. The double flowers will be easily noticed when grown in a patio urn or window box which is closer to the admirer's eyes.

An AAS bedding plant winner, Salvia Farinacea, Strata contains a new quality for Salvia. It has a new bi-color bloom with ten to twelve inch flower spikes. From a distance, the eye sees the two colors as a pastel blue. This unique color is on an easy to grow, sun-loving plant. Strata plants can attain a height of 1½ to 2 feet tall.

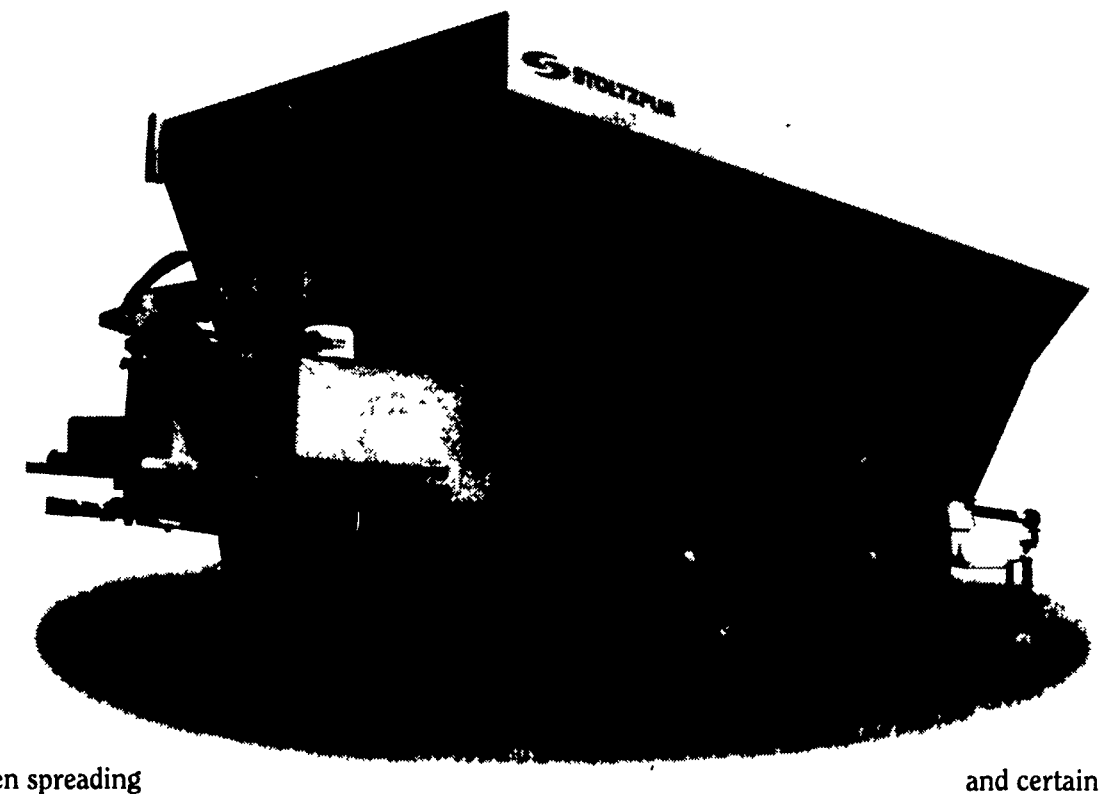
The 1996 Perennial plant winner of the year is Penstemon digitalis Husker Red. This plant was selected for its long season ornamental effect. It prefers full sun, well-drained soil and tolerates drought. Use it as an accent plant, massed in borders or as a plant selection.

Penstemon Husker Red has a rich bronze-red foliage that provides a striking contrast to masses of white flowers. Enjoy them indoors by cutting the flowers for fresh floral arrangements.

When plants are well established, height averages about 30 inches. As many as 50 white flowers are produced on each of 20 or more open, airy, flower stalks during July and August.

Questions on the above may be directed to Thomas S. Becker, Extension Agent-Horticulture, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402. Phone number is (717) 840-7408.

Sometimes You Need A Spreader Built Like A Tank.



When spreading stockpiled lime, for example. The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus, for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter and certain fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading. We call that performance. You'll call it terrific.

We hope you compare a Stoltzfus WLS with other spreaders. It makes us look even better. Price? Sure we may be a little more. But when you end up replacing cheaper units in a few short years, what have you saved? Stoltzfus quality always pays foritself many times over.

Just how tough is a Stoltzfus WLS? Plenty tough. Call today. We'll tell you where to find the dealer nearest you, and send you free literature to inspect.

The complete poem appeared in the 12/9 issue, but we need to condense for space. It's her grandmother's favorite poem and she could recite every word until a stroke took her voice. She is 89 and in a nursing home, but Glenda reads this poem to her every Christmas. Glenda said that there may be parts missing or wrong since she wrote it from memory.

The yule log blazed in the ancient hold.

was better dressed than any guest and fairer in the face.
Yet never a thought of pride had she

ANSWER — D. Hurst, Ephrata, wanted to know where to purchase either a hand-operated or an electric butter churn. Thanks to Ed Martin who writes that they may be ordered through the Cumberland General Store catalog, which can be purchased at H.W. Weit & Sons, E. Main St., Ephrata.

ANSWER — Deborah Ford, Millers, Md., wanted recipes for soap made without lye. Thanks to Karen Kinnaine, Shartlesville, for explaining that soap cannot be made without lye because of saponification, which is the process of combining lye with animal fat. It's a chemical change that occurs with the combination of the two ingredients. The lye in the soap doesn't burn because it's been chemically changed into a new substance: soap.

Thanks to Lisa Sparr for sending a recipe to make liquid soap. Since it calls for bar soap, this process does not contradict Karen's explanation.

Liquid Hand Soap

3.5 ounce bar soap with moisturizing cream
3 cups water

Shred bar of soap. Place soap and water in a 2-quart butter bowl, stirring every 2 minutes, microwave on high 5-6 minutes or until soap is dissolved. Let stand until completely cool. Mixture thickens as it cools. Fill soad dispensers. Makes 3 cups.

Note: Do not use soap unless it has moisturizing cream on it, the result would be a stringy mess.

ANSWER — Bernice Jones, Terra Alta, W.V., wanted the words to the poem, "Who Killed Cook Robin." Thanks to Elmer Janney, Nottingham, who stopped by the office with a muslin picture book of the poem. No date was on the book, but it definitely is an old book in excellent condition that had been published by Saalfields with publishing companies in Akron, Ohio, Chicago, and New York. The muslin book has this printed on it: All my other books are worn and the leaves are badly torn, but my muslin books I found here as good as newly bound. Janney has tried to locate the publisher to determine the date but has been unsuccessful. Also, thanks to Sue Baughman, Gordonville, and Sally A. Krammes, Schulykill Haven, for sending the words.

Who Killed Cock Robin?

Who killed Cock Robin?
I, said the Sparrow
With my bow and arrow,
I killed Cock Robin.

Who saw him die?
I, said the Fly,
With my little eye,
I saw him die.

Who caught his blood?
I said the Fish,
With my little dish,
I caught his blood.

Who'll make the shroud?
I, said the Beetle,
With my thread and needle,
I'll make the shroud.

Who'll dig his grave?
I, said the Owl,
With my pick and shovel
I'll dig his grave.

Who'll be the parson?
I, said the Rook
With my little book,
I'll be the parson.

Who'll be the clerk?
I, said the Lark,
If it's not in the dark
I'll be the clerk.

Who'll carry the link?
I, said the Linnet,
I'll fetch it in a minute,
I'll carry the link.

Who'll be chief mourner?
I, said the Dove,
I mourn for my love,
I'll be chief mourner.

Who'll carry the coffin?
I, said the kite,
If it's not through the night,
I'll carry the coffin.

Who'll bear the pall?
We, said the Wren,
Both the cock and the hen
We'll bear the pall.

Who'll sing a psalm?
I, said the thrush
As she sat on a bush.
I'll sing a psalm.

Who'll toll the bell?
I, said the Bull
Because I can pull,
I'll toll the bell.

All the birds of the air
Fell a-signing and a-sobbing,
When they heard the bell toll
For poor Cock Robin.

ANSWER — Fran Pierman, 723 Rosemont Ringoes Rd. Stockton, N.J. 08559, wanted the music and words to an old song called "Granny's Old Arm Chair," author unknown. Here are the words from Anna Mary Rohrer, East Berlin; Joanne Musser, McVeytown; and Melva Baumer, Millmont.

Grandmother's Old Armchair

My grandmother, she, at the age of eighty-three,
One day in May was taken ill and died;
And after she was dead the will of course was read
By a lawyer as we all stood side by side.
To my brother, it was found, she had left a hundred pound,
The same unto my sister, I declare;
But when it came to me the lawyer said, "I see
She has left to you her old armchair.

Now they tittered, how they chaffed,
Now my brother and sister laughed,
When they heard the lawyer declare

I thought it hardly fair, still I said I did not care,
And in the evening took the chair away.
My brother at me laughed, the lawyer at me chaffed,
And said, "It will come useful, John, some day
When you settle down in life, find some girl to be your wife,
You'll find it very handy, I declare,
On a cold and frosty night, when the fire is burning bright,
You can sit in your old armchair.
What the lawyer said was true, for in a year or two,
Strange to say, I settled down to married life.
I first a girl did court and then a ring I bought,
Took her to the church, and then she was my wife.
Now the dear girl and me are as happy as can be,
And when my work is over, I declare,
I ne'er abroad would roam, but each night I'd stay at home,
And be seated in my old arm chair.

One night the chair fell down, when I picked it up I found
The seat had fallen out upon the floor.
And there before my eyes I saw to my surprise
A lot of notes, ten thousand pounds or more.
When my brother heard of the poor fellow, I confess
Went nearly wild with rage and tore his hair.
But I only laughted at him and I said unto him, 'Jim
Don't you wish, you had the old armchair?"

No more they tittered, no more they chaffed,
No more my brother and sister laughed,
When they heard the lawyer declare

PRODUCTION GUIDES

The 1996 Pennsylvania commercial production guides are available in your local extension office for both tree fruit and vegetables.

There have been many changes in registered chemicals in both of these guides and I urge you to obtain a copy to become familiar with the most recent changes.

The vegetable guide in particular contains many new chemical recommendations. Dr. Shelby Fleischer, entomology specialist with Penn State, commented that there are more changes this year alone than he has seen in the previous few years combined.

So those of you who don't purchase new guides every year may want to consider this an important update guide.

Last week we held the York/Lancaster County Vegetable Growers Meeting in York County. The following is a summary of the information presented at the meeting that I hope will be helpful in your operations.

We started with an update on potato pest control products. The threat of a late blight outbreak still exists in Pennsylvania as well as in other areas of the country this year. Strains of this disease exist on both tomatoes and potatoes that are resistant to metalaxyl (Ridomil) and thus use of this compound does not imply protection from blight.

Researchers still don't know for certain whether a late blight infection in a tomato field can spread to a nearby potato field. The current belief is that the disease will not spread since the strains of blight on each crop are different.

The new strains of late blight are a major concern not only because of the resistance factor but there are also some other physiological differences. The new strains grow in a higher temperature range, they are more aggressive, and they attack the stems as well as the leaves which results in a faster rate of plant takedown during infection.

The EPA has cancelled use of Captan on potatoes (except seed treatment — check the label). The PDA is submitting information to have Curzate, Acrobat, and Tattoo again registered for use under Section 18 regulations. Watch this column for future news on these compounds. These compounds provide good control of late blight when applied properly and in a timely manner. The outbreak of late blight in Lancaster County last year was in an unsprayed field, so I urge you to consider applying protectant fungicides this year.

There was a discussion of the new insecticide imadacloroprid (Admire and Provado). This compound provides excellent control of Colorado potato beetle but is considered expensive to use (on a per-acre basis). There are some restrictions as to crops that can be planted following potatoes, so be sure to check the label.

It is recommended that you only use this compound one time per year on your field and if beetles become a problem then you should use another type of chemical. This is to help prevent the creation of beetles resistant to imadacloroprid. I have been told that resistance already exists in laboratory populations so we need to use this chemical carefully to slow the development of field resistance.

Rotating between chemicals with different modes of action against any type of insect population is a good control strategy to slow or prevent the buildup of resistance to any one chemical compound.

As I mentioned earlier, there are many new compounds in the vegetable production guide this year. These new compounds are different from some of our previous products in that many are for specific insects and others have a "biological" background.

For example, Neemix and Align are seed extracts from the neem tree, a tropical species. These new compounds are effective against their target insects but some are short-lived in the field.

There is a trend in the chemical industry to continue to develop compounds that are targeted to specific pests or a particular stage of insect development. This replaces the previous philosophy of developing "hot" compounds that were very toxic and non-specific in terms of insect species controlled. Many of the pesticides we have now will probably be lost in the future as chemical companies struggle with the economic requirements of reregistration.

As we continue to lose chemical compounds, more growers are looking to biological and biorational controls. These methods of pest management can be very effective but they take a greater degree of management skills. Chemical control is relatively easy — you spray when the pest population becomes damaging and the situation is corrected. In biological control, you need to monitor the pest population closely to determine when control is necessary but the difference is that biological controls aren't all fast-acting like chemicals are. The lag period in terms of pest control can result in loss of a portion of the crop and thus timing of control measures is critical. However, biological controls are frequently safer to use and the use of biologicals can be a very effective marketing tool.

Weed management in some vegetable crops can be difficult, particularly where there is a population of weeds resistant to herbicides. However, there are some cultural practices that can be used to manage even the most difficult weeds. The following is a list of management practices to control problem weeds:

1. Maintain the proper soil pH.
2. Band fertilizers.
3. Moldboard plowing every 3-4 years (in minimum-till fields).
4. Cultivate when weeds are young.
5. Use crop canopy for light competition.
6. Mow field before seeding.
7. Fumigate.
8. Use plastic mulch.
9. Site selection.
10. Use stale seed beds for planting.
11. Thermal weed control (flaming).

There are also several different approaches to vegetable disease management. The first is chemical control. Try to rotate among chemical types used to reduce the possibility of development of resistance.

Another very effective control strategy is crop rotation. The length of time between growing the same crop on a field will vary with the disease you are trying to control, but generally is two to three years.

Remember, it is better to go too long between than to cut it too short. Always start with clean seed or transplants and select resistant varieties whenever possible. Maintain adequate fertility and insect control to prevent plants from becoming weakened and thus more susceptible to disease infection.

Disk in residues immediately after the field is harvested if that is where the disease overwinters. And finally, avoid working in wet fields in crops where diseases are easily spread in those conditions (such as beans).

The more methods of disease control you are able to use, the more likely you are to have a successful disease control program.

FORWARD GRAZING SYSTEMS

Lowell L. Wilson and Harold W. Harpster
Professor of Animal Science
Department of Dairy and Animal Science
The Pennsylvania State University

Producers have increasingly adopted improved grazing systems in Pennsylvania and throughout the U.S. The real nutritional and economic benefits of these systems have been realized by essentially every type of animal producer — dairy, beef, sheep.

Most of the implemented grazing systems have utilized the "intensive" or "short-duration" approach. However, there are additional practices that can be used to further enhance total animal performance and efficiency of forage utilization.

One of these added components is the use of a "forward grazing system," also referred to as "lead-follow" or "top-bottom" systems. By this method, different qualities of grazable forages available on all farms can be utilized more efficiently by animals with different nutritional requirements.

• Nutritional contents of different forage plant parts. We are all familiar with the variation in nutritional content of forage plants of different maturities, species, harvest seasons and other factors. One of the basic reasons we use short-duration systems is to harvest the forage by grazing when it is at optimum maturity and nutritional value. Variability in nutritional content is also found within a single plant. As an example, in recent Penn State research, the protein content of stems and leaves in alfalfa, orchardgrass, and perennial ryegrass were compared. Averaged over all seasons of sampling — spring, summer and fall — total protein percent of alfalfa stems averaged 9 percent with leaves averaging 41 percent. Comparable averages for orchardgrass and perennial ryegrass were 6.5 percent for stems and 30 percent total protein for leaves. These samples were taken from plots using weekly movement of cattle.

The differences may even be greater in an extensive grazing system where there would be more variation in stage of maturity within the pasture.

The "top-bottom" grazing system allocates the parts of the plant with higher nutritional value to animals that can most efficiently (and profitably) utilize this higher-quality feed. As an example, high-producing animals grazing an orchardgrass-based pasture system would be allowed to graze a paddock when the pasture is about 7 to 8 inches tall containing about 2,100-2,400 pounds DM/acre. These high-producing animals should be removed when the pasture height is grazed down to three to four inches. (Available pasture begins to limit pasture intake when grazed to a lower residual). Conversely, the same system allocates the lower-quality parts of the forage plant or residual to animals with low to moderate nutrient requirements which will not utilize feeds of higher nutritional value as efficiently or as profitably. The system depends upon the grazing of pasture or swards first by animals with high nutritional requirements, followed by animals with lower nutritional requirements.

• Animals with low, moderate or high requirements. Following are some different types of grazing animals with high nutritional requirements which could serve as lead or top grazers in a forward grazing system (Table 1). The minimum protein requirement for this type of animal is 12 percent to 14.5 percent. There are similarly high energy requirements for the animals listed as lead or top grazers. Most importantly, a high-quality forage consumed by these animals would represent the most efficient and profitable use of this high-quality feed.

Also in Table 1 are listed types of grazing animals with low or moderate nutritional requirements. If allowed to graze a pasture first, these animals would naturally consume the highest quality forage available and their nutrient intake would exceed their nutritional requirements. The key to the system is to allow the lead or top grazers to utilize 35 percent to 50 percent of the available higher-quality forages, followed immediately in the grazing rotation by animals with lower or moderate nutritional requirements.

Streambank Fencing Slide Program Available

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Over the past four years, an increasing number of farmers in the Pequea Creek and Mill Creek watersheds have included streambank fencing as an important part of their livestock and pasture management.

The primary objective of streambank fencing is to limit livestock access to streams and streambanks.

As part of their water quality efforts, the Pequea-Mill Creek Project staff has worked hard to encourage and assist farmers to adopt this practice. A 10-minute narrated slide program based on these efforts produced by the project staff is now available.

The Pequea-Mill Creek Project is a USDA water quality program project located in the intensively farmed area of central Lancaster County. The goal of the Pequea-Mill Creek Project is to reduce the pollution of surface water and groundwater from nutrients, bacteria, sediment and pesticides. Because many of the 55,000 dairy animals in the project area spend time in pastures that include a stream, streambank fencing has been an important focus of the project. More than 22 miles of streambanks have been fenced in Pequea-Mill Creek watersheds as part of the project.

The streambank fencing slide-tape program presents the purposes, benefits, and components of streambank fencing based on the work done through the Pequea-Mill Creek Project. Farmers and livestock owners can learn the many benefits of streambank fencing in addition to improved water quality from the slide set. The slide program is an excellent educational resource for everyone involved in efforts to improve and protect water quality in rural areas. Much of the information collected or developed in the project and presented in the slide set will apply to other locations where livestock in streams is a water quality problem.

The slide program is available through Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. To purchase, send $25 to Agricultural Information Services, The Pennsylvania State University, 119 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802-2602. Make checks payable to Penn State. Additional information about the slide set is available from Jerry Martin, Pequea-Mill Creek Project, 307B Airport Drive, P.O. Box 211, Smoketown, PA 17576-0211, (717) 396-9423.

• Selectivity by grazing animals. One of the reasons that forward grazing systems can be effective relates to the grazing behavior of cattle and sheep. The digestibility of the forage consumed by ruminants grazing a pasture is often 8 to 12 percentage units higher than the overall sward. When given the opportunity, ruminants are adept at selecting the more nutritious plant parts (primarily leaves) and avoiding the stems and dead material. In general, sheep are slightly more efficient in this process than cattle. The forage consumed by sheep will typically be 2-4 percentage units of digestibility higher than that selected by cattle grazing the same pasture.

The results of a creep grazing trial with beef cattle are presented in Table 2. Forage samples were collected from an alfalfa x orchardgrass pasture at three time points: before any grazing; after the calves had grazed the pasture, and after the cows had grazed the pasture. The decline in protein and the increase in crude fiber content during a relatively short time period clearly illustrates the selectivity practiced by both groups. It's obvious that forage quality was more closely matched to nutrient requirements by creep grazing than if cows and calves had grazed the sward together.

Table 2. Forage Quality Changes With Forward Grazing In Alfalfa-Orchardgrass Pastures

After Grazing by Calves	16	30
After Grazing by Cows	13	40

Some Penn State Beef Cattle Results:

• System using beef cow-calf herd and yearling steers. In this system, the cattle were moved weekly with 600-pound yearling steers as the lead or top grazers, and cows and calves as the follow grazers. The yearling steers that were top-grazed gained 15 percent more during the grazing season than did similar yearling steers grazed on their own set of pastures without use of the forward grazing system. The cows and calves which served as bottom grazers gained approximately 10 percent less than cows and calves that had access to their own set of pastures. However, 28 days after the end of the grazing season there was no difference in the weights of the cows and calves from the forward versus the conventional rotational grazing system. The yearling steers were fed a growing-finishing diet after grazing. The top-grazed steers maintained most of the weight advantage that they had accumulated during the grazing season throughout the finishing period.

The lower off-pasture weight of the bottom-grazed calves may question the value of the forward-grazing system. However, more cow-calf producers are using a 3-week preconditioning program before selling calves, or keeping the calves either on their own farms or through a retained ownership program using a custom feeder. In these situations, the lower calf weight at weaning time would not be as important as if the calves were sold immediately after weaning and removal from pasture.

• Pasture creep-feeding system. Another system researched at Penn State which uses the forward grazing approach allows the calves at the side of the cow to "creep graze" ahead of the cows in a rotational program. Weekly movement of cows and calves was also used in this project. The performance of the calves in the creep-grazing system was compared to calves that were either

Redding Attends Director Institute

YORK (York Co.) — Russell C. Redding, outside director for the York Farm Credit, ACA, recently attended the 1996 Pennsylvania Cooperative Director Institute, entitled "Positioning Your Cooperative For Change."

Redding joined more than 45 directors from 15 cooperative organizations serving members in 10 states for this 12th in a series of cooperative director institutes sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State University's Cooperative Business Education and Research Program.

The purpose of the institute is to train and equip directors of the region's member-owned cooperative organizations with the knowledge and skills necessary to operate successfully in the rapidly changing business environment.

Redding, who joined the York Farm Credit Board of Directors in October 1995, serves as Pennsylvania's Deputy Secretary of Agriculture. Prior to his appointment, he served as the agriculture policy adviser to U.S. Senator Harris Wofford. Redding was graduated from Penn State with a bachelor's degree in agriculture education and is working on a master's in adult education.

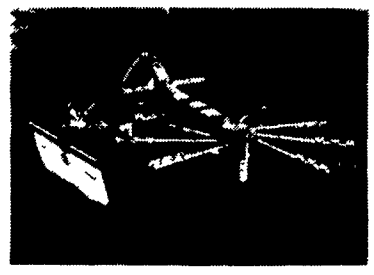
Kuhn Introduces Gyrorake

VERNON, N.Y. — A model of highly productive Gyrorake has been released incorporating the ability to remove the tine arms for reduced transport width and storage. The GA3201 GM Gyrorake is from Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., Vernon, N.Y. and Kuhn S.A. Saverne France.

Gyrorake offers the following benefits to the operator:

- Rotary rake concept for superior raking quality — fluffy windrows with roping, and faster drying and operation.
- Ability to function as a windrow inverter, which aids in drying with minimal leaf damage.
- Fully enclosed, practically maintenance-free Kuhn-made gearbox, with proven reliability.



A model of highly productive Gyrorake has been released incorporating the ability to remove the tine arms for reduced transport width and storage.

- Tangential tine arms — for gentler crop raking, higher working speeds, narrower transport and reduced storage space.

Adapter Matches Windrower Heads To Bidirectional Tractors

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The Model 2300BF adapter mates New Holland self-propelled windrower heads to the Model 9030 Bidirectional™ tractor using the tractor's drive-in loader attachment system.

This turns the Bidirectional tractor into a heavy-duty, self-propelled windrower, according to New Holland product management.

The combination has added advantages because the tractor's four-wheel drive effectively doubles flotation and traction for soft ground and crossing ditches. Fast hookup and disconnect let operators easily remove the header to free the tractor for other work.

Mowing and conditioning capacity can be doubled by teaming the "9030" and windrower head with a pull-type pivot-tongue Model 1475 Habine® mower-conditioner. If both units are equipped with 18-foot headers, one operator can clear 36 feet of crop in a single pass. Conditioned crop from "2300BF" unit can be deposited in 38-inch windrows or in swaths up to 84 inches wide.

Twelve-, 14- and 16-foot heads are available in addition to the 18-foot units that are the widest in the industry, according to the company.

The Model 2300BF adapter mates New Holland self-propelled windrower heads to the Model 9030 Bidirectional™ tractor. The unit attaches to the "9030" using the drive-in loader mount system. Twelve-, 14-, 16- and 18-foot auger headers with conditioners are offered.

DMI Introduces Deep Tillage System

GOODFIELD, Ill. — DMI has taken precision tillage to a whole new level with the new ecolo-til 2500 that offers a "systems" approach to tillage and pre-applied fertilizer.

The development of this new line of tillage tools was based on the philosophy of reducing plant stress and erosion while increasing water absorption, and improving fertilizer effectiveness to maximize plant growth potential.

Through extensive research and testing, DMI has manufactured the new ecolo-til 2500 to offer a variety of solutions to corn, soybean, wheat and cotton growers who utilize different tillage methods, including no-till, mulch-till, and ridge-till.

With the new ecolo-til 2500, DMI now offers the first effective tillage system to match the high residue requirements of no-till.

There are two different configurations available that are especially effective for HEL ground. The first utilizes all new no-till shanks and 8-inch no-till points that are specifically designed for no-tillers who demand the least amount of surface residue disturbance possible for erosion control, while still fracturing compaction and increasing water absorption.

The second configuration uses the same no-till shanks and points, but lowers the residue disturbance level even further by using new DMI Berm Tuck'rs®. These special packer wheels level the tillage berm behind the shank for virtually disturbance-free tillage.

With the new ecolo-til 2500, DMI now offers the first effective tillage system to match the high residue requirements of no-till.

For fields requiring more aggressive fracturing of compaction and mixing of residue, DMI offers two proven systems to choose from for varying compliance requirements. The MRD (Minimum Residue Disturbance) shank works in conjunction with 2-inch straight, 5-inch or 7-inch winged tiger-points® to effectively relocate compacted soil layers while leaving the surface relatively undisturbed.

The most aggressive tillage option is the DMI parabolic shank, a 1¼ -inch x 3-inch edge-bent shank that lifts and fractures compaction and covers more residue than straight shank designs. The winged tiger-points and optional 4-inch or 6-inch coverboards work in tandem to provide a high level of residue and soil mixing.

The ecolo-til 2500's wider, 22-inch rank spacing increases the tool's ability to handle high residue and allows the use of a larger 22-inch colter. Colter down pressure has been increased by 40 percent for more aggressive cutting of residue and soil slitting ahead of the shanks.

An anhydrous ammonia or clear liquid fertilizer placement kit is available that enables an ecolo-til 2500 to precision place fertilizer during tillage.

not-creep-fed or grain-creep-fed.

Grain-creep feeding added about 50 pounds of weight per calf at weaning, with pasture-creep feeding adding about one-half of this amount or 25 pounds. Although the dams of the pasture-creed-fed calves lost slightly more weight (16 pounds) during the grazing season, the differences in body weight gain or loss of the cows were not of consequence. Assuming a cost of $250 per ton for the grain-creep feed, the cost of weight gain added by feeding grain to the calves compared to the non-creep feeding system was 77 cents per pound of increased gain. Because of the wide variability in the cost of conducting the pasture-creep system, costs for pasture-creep feeding were not calculated. However, using cost of gain for grain-creep-feeding as a guideline, the pasture-creep system should be more economical with regard to adding weight gain to suckling beef calves. This is especially true with high grain prices.

One of the advantages of the pasture-creep versus the grain-creep system was that the calves were apparently not as fat at weaning time. Heifer calves that accumulate excessive body fat during the pre-weaning period have been shown to not produce as much milk when they become brood cows. Also, cattle feeders generally prefer feeder calves that are not excessively fat since they have learned that such calves exhibit efficient "compensatory gain" when placed on feed. Therefore, the pasture-creep system has an advantage with regard to body composition as well as utilizing home-grown forages more efficiently through grazing systems. Pasture creep-feeding coupled with forward grazing of yearling steers could prevent the 10 percent decrease in calf weight observed in the Penn State forward grazing research.

Guidelines and concluding points:

1. No more than 50 percent of the total forage biomass available to be grazed should be used by the lead grazers. If the follow grazers have a moderate (versus low) nutritional requirement, then more of the higher-quality forage should be left for them to graze.

2. Ordinarily the forward grazing system requires the same number of paddocks as a system with top and bottom grazing animals allotted their own set of pastures. However, to maintain the required rest period for the forage plants, more paddocks may be required.

3. Usually the same total number of grazing acres are used for the forward system as if the different types of livestock are grazed on separate pastures.

4. The system is not difficult to manage and does not require much more time or cost.

5. Such practices as pasture-creep-feeding can be accomplished with gates between pastures allowing the calves but not cows to pass through and return. Electric fences high enough to let the calves go under but not the cows can also be used.

6. Leader/follower systems can be somewhat "self-regulating" when used as a creep feeding method. As the young calves grow and consume more of the highly nutritious plant material (leaving a progressively lower quality material for the dams), the mother's milk production is declining and a lower quantity and quality of forage is required.

7. Designated areas that are grazed only by lambs or calves can also be used for pasture-creep grazing; these areas should be highly palatable and nutritious forages which are not necessarily needed for the cows or ewes.

8. Two cautions in any leader/follower system are: a) "Don't penalize the followers" (at least not to an unacceptable degree) and b) "Don't overgraze the pasture."

Export Gains To Absorb More Than Half Of Beef Production Increases

DENVER, Colo. — With industry forecasts of higher beef production and lower cattle prices for 1996 weighing on the minds of cattle producers, U.S. Meat Export Federation (USMEF) officials are encouraging them to keep their heads up and their eyes on the horizon.

"Because," said USMEF Chairman and Wyoming cattleman Rick Allen, "that's where much of the increased production will be heading."

USMEF estimates that the increase in U.S. beef sales to foreign markets this year will absorb 54 percent of the beef industry's projected increase in production in 1996.

"The investments we've been making in foreign market development will pay off especially well this year," said Allen, crediting the beef checkoff and USDA export programs for backing industry marketing programs in foreign markets. "Though increased production will put heavy pressure on cattle prices this year, the additional beef sales to foreign markets will provide a solid floor of support."

USMEF projects that U.S. beef exports in 1996, not including beef variety meats, will increase 18 percent to a record 673,000 metric tons, up from an estimate of 570,000 metric tons in 1995. A 103,000 metric ton increase in 1996 would mean an additional 227 million pounds of high-quality beef will be exported on a product-weight equivalent basis (325 million pounds, carcass-weight basis).

Meanwhile, Cattle-Fax projects that U.S. beef production will rise 600 million pounds in 1996, from 25.0 billion pounds in 1995 to 25.6 billion pounds (carcass-weight equivalent). Comparing the 325 million-pound increase in exports with the additional 600 million pounds in production means that as much as 54 percent of the industry's additional production could be exported in 1996.

"We need demand to offset as much of the increase in production as possible," said Tom Brink, director of market research at Cattle-Fax, in discussing the current five-year period of expanding beef production. "Export markets have been a remarkable help. We've been very impressed with the industry's export growth, especially in 1995 with what happened to the Mexican market."

Sharp increases in U.S. beef exports to Japan, Korea, Russia, Hong Kong and Taiwan in 1995 more than offset an estimated 57 percent plunge in exports to Mexico. In fact, USMEF estimates that U.S. beef exports in 1995, not including beef variety meats, increased 67,000 metric tons over 1994. This indicates that export gains absorbed about 30 percent of the beef industry's increased production in 1995.

Citing reduced trade barriers, rising beef consumption in the Asia-Pacific and USMEF marketing programs which have stimulated world-wide demand for high-quality U.S. beef, Allen believes the U.S. beef industry can sustain strong levels of export growth well into the next century. He said export markets will have an increasingly significant impact on the industry's profitability, pointing to a Cattle-Fax study conducted early last year which showed that U.S. beef and variety meat exports in 1994 added $84 per head to the value of fed cattle, compared to $17 per head in 1985.

"Exports will continue to mean more and more to this industry," said Allen. "But only if we step up our pursuit of the trade and market development opportunities that exist now, and work even harder to create new opportunities for tomorrow."

He said, "you can bet our competitors from Australia, New Zealand, Argentina and the EU recognize these export opportunities and are acting on them."

Penn State Block and Bridle Club

SPRING SEMESTER

Once again, the spring semester at Penn State finds the Block and Bridle club members busy in a number of activities.

The largest project for the semester is the 79th Little International Livestock Exposition which will be held on Saturday, April 13, 1996, beginning at 8 a.m. at the Agricultural Arena on the Penn State campus.

The club has already begun halter-breaking the beef cattle that will be used in this year's show and has had showmanship demonstrations on the four species that will be exhibited. This year's show manager is Kristen Hazlett, and her assistant is Jennifer Garman.

Kristen and Jen have been working diligently to make this year's Little "I" a successful and enjoyable event for everyone, and they look forward to seeing B & B alumni as well as friends and family return to Penn State for the 79th Little "I".

The Block and Bridle club recently held its annual Animal Products Spectacular at the Nittany Mall on Feb. 10. This year's Animal Products Spectacular featured displays that promoted the beef, pork, veal, poultry, and dairy goat milk industries.

The annual cooking contest held in conjunction with animal products was won by Kristen Hazlett with second place going to Jean Hazlett. Gail Biddle finished third. The group display contest was won by the Penn State Poultry Science Club, which incorporated samples of very tasty chicken, turkey, and egg dishes with their display. The individual display contest was won by Katie Biddle who promoted the numerous products that are made from dairy goat milk.

Congratulations to everyone who particpiated and to all of the winners!

This year's Animal Products Spectacular was chaired by Elena Sawickij, who was assisted by Katie Biddle.

Elena and Katie did an excellent job and would like to thank the numerous commodity groups and businesses that supported this years Animal Products Spectacular.

On March 1, 14 B & B members traveled with Dairy Science Club members to the University of Delaware in Newark to participate in the 1996 Northeast Student Affiliate (NESA) meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association. Club members competed in quiz bowl, oral paper presentations, and a judging contest. Penn State also was competing for recognition as the outstanding institution in the Northeast and had a candidate competing for oustanding senior.

More details will follow next month on the eventual outcome at this year's NESA.

Last year's win at NESA allowed a quiz bowl team to attend the annual meeting of the National Cattlemen's Association in San Antonio, Texas, to represent the Northeast in the beef quiz bowl. The Penn State team, once again, went unbeaten in that competition and won the national beef quiz bowl competition. Congratulations to team members Brian McAllister, Bill Beinlich, Daryl Bomgardner, and Josh Harvatine.

The Penn State B & B club is in the middle of its spring meat sale. This year's selections include Hatfield family classic hams, Penn State beef summer sausage in both two pound and 14-ounce sizes, and the new Penn State smoke and honey stick available in a 26-ounce size. Orders can be placed with any B & B member. Delivery of the products will be during the week leading up to Easter.

Until next month, that's all from the Penn State Block and Bridle Club. Make your plans now to attend the 79th Little "I"!

Delmarva Safety Seminar, Expo March 12-13

NEWARK, Del. — The 19th Annual Delmarva Safety Seminar and Exposition will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, March 12-13, at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury, Md.

The event is sponsored by the Delmarva Safety Association in cooperation with Delaware Cooperative Extension, universities and area businesses.

This year's event will include expanded full-day intensive training workshops on Tuesday. These workshops will include first aid essentials, the anatomy of a fall, hazard communication, understanding the workers comp system, catastrophic loss: are you prepared, and CPR certification.

Wednesday will feature six workshops, several outside demonstrations, and the exposition. The workshops will include modifying employees behavior, regulatory safety training requirements and monitoring, surviving an OSHA inspection, back talk, compressed gases, and assessment of lead in the workplace.

The safety exposition promises more than 50 exhibitors. In addition to exhibits by safety equipment companies, there will be OSHA and MOSHA consultation booths, health monitoring, and other special-interest displays.

For more information or a registration packet, contact Ron Jester, extension safety specialist at the University of Delaware, at (302) 856-7303.

Chamber Names National Outstanding Young Farmers

Receiving top honors for 1996 from a field of 34 state entrants were Lowell Berntson of Kulm, N.D., Roy William Crow of Kennedyville, Md., Marty Klinker of Fairfield, Mont., and Dennis W. West of Rice Lake, Wis.

The National Outstanding Young Farmer award is co-sponsored by Deere & Company and Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. and is supported by the Outstanding Farmers of America fraternity. The event is the oldest farmer recognition program in the world and honors the achievements of a diverse group of enterprising famers and ranchers across the country.

The National Outstanding Young Farmers from 1996 are:

• Roy William Crow, 39, Kennedyville, Md. — A graduate of the University of Maryland, he is the sole proprietor of a 500-acre dairy and grain farm. He has won several awards and honors for breeding a top pure bred herd, reaching top production levels and being a leader in farm management practices. A member of several professional and civic associations, he and his wife Elizabeth have three children.

• Lowell Berntson, 37, Kulm, N.D. — The sole proprietor of a 4,232-acre grain and cattle farm in the "prairie pothole" region of North Dakota, he has met the challenge of limited rainfall through innovative procedures such as residue management, minimum till and no-till practices, and a one-pass operation for most small grains. He has found good profit in specialty crops such as pinto beans and confectionary sunflowers. He and his wife Carol have two children.

• Marty Klinker, 33, Fairfield, Mont. — He is the sole proprietor of a 1,880-acre grain, hay, grass and cattle operation. He was one of the first farmers in Montana to try canola as an alternative crop and he utilized chemical fallowing long before it was an accepted practice. His diversification and specialization has enabled him to survive weather disasters and market swings. He and his wife Marcia have two children.

• Dennis West, 35, Rice Lake, Wis. — He manages a 7,265-acre potato and corn farm and was one of the first farmers in the nation to install an automatic baling machine for potatoes. His operation is rated four star, the highest produce rating in the industry, and he is on the board of directors for the Wisconsin Potato and Vegetable Growers Association. He and his wife Susan have three children.

The 34 entrants were judged on their progress in their agricultural career, the extent of their soil and water conservation practices, and their contributions to the well-being of their community, state and nation.

The judges were Doug Carrigan, Mooresville, N.C., president of the Outstanding Farmers of America fraternity; Tom Cherry, Bakersfield, Calif., manager-treasurer of the California Planting Cotton Seed Distributors; Wes Cooley, congressman from Oregon's second district; Dr. Howard Doster, West Layfatte, Ind., extension farm-management specialist at Purdue University; and John Winfield, Jackson, Miss., president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters.

President Bill Clinton sent a letter of congratulations to each of the four national winners. "Because of the skills, energy, and determination of farmers like you," Clinton wrote, "I am confident that American agriculture will continue to be a leader in international industry and a source of pride for all our citizens."

Program To Support Cattle Industry

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The future of the Pennsylvania cattle industry is brighter thanks to Generations of Excellence, a new program unveiled by Merck Ag Vet at the National Cattlemen's Association Convention and Trade Show here recently.

The initiative is designed to build closer alliances between Merck Ag Vet, cattle associations, and the next generation of cattle industry leaders and innovators by providing much-needed funding at the state level.

"The Generations of Excellence program is built on the idea of giving something back to the cattle industry," said Stewart Bauck, DVM, senior director of marketing, production animal products, U.S. operations, for Merck Ag Vet. "The goal at Merck Ag Vet has always been to provide quality products and service to cattle producers, while maintaining a position of long-term commitment to the cattle industry."

The Generations of Excellence program offers an opportunity for all 46 state cattle associations affiliated with the Naitonal Cattlemen's Association to receive funds from Merck Ag Vet based on the amount of IVOMEC (ivermectin) Pour-On and IVOMEC Plus (ivermectin & clorsulon) products purchased and coupons redeemed in their respective states. State associations may then use these funds for worthwhile activities that foster scholarship and leadership among young people.

"Merck Ag Vet strongly encourages state cattle associations to consider funding scholarships for college students who demonstrate academic excellence and show a strong interest in the cattle industry," said Bauck. "This will help ensure the next generation of cattle industry leaders is prepared to face the challenges."

Senate Farm Bill A 'Sell Out' To Farm Families?

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The farm bill passed by the U.S. Senate was termed a "sell out of American farm families and their values to the special interests of agribusiness and a license for a few corporations to further dominate the marketing, processing and trading of agricultural commodities" by National Farmers Union President Leland Swenson.

Representing 250,000 farm, ranch and other rural families across the nation, Swenson expressed concern that the Agricultural Transition Act would escalate the move of U.S. agriculture away from its system of independently owned and operated family farms to that of contract production.

"How ironic it is for this reform-minded Congress to establish a brand new bureaucracy instead of enacting real farm policy reforms. The Agricultural Transition Act guarantees payments regardless of commodity prices and regardless of whether or not a crop is even planted," said Swenson. "This bill would provide producers with a short-term gain, but it will inevitably lead to long-term economic pain for independent family farmers and for other rural communities,"

The Senate is irresponsible in this proposal to enact policies which maximize production, lower commodity prices at the farm gate, and make set payments, said Swenson. He also noted that under this bill, farmers would be asked to sign seven-year compliance contracts without even knowing what their transition payments will be.

The Agricultural Transition Act caps marketing loan rates for seven years. The maximum loan rates under this bill would be: corn — $1.89 per bushel; wheat — $2.58 per bushel; soybeans — $5.26 per bushel; cotton — 52 cents per pound; and rice — $6.50 cwt.

"Loan rates are capped at artificially low levels, stripping away any opportunity producers might have to market their commodities in a manner that positively affects farm income," said Swenson. "After two years under this program, production would increase significantly, driving down prices."

Farmers Union supports the U.S. Senate's retention of permanent farm law and the reauthorization of nutrition, conservation and rural development programs, as well as increased planting flexibility.

"Beyond the devastating economic impact this proposal would have on rural communities, we need to question the long-term consequences of a food supply controlled by a handful of multinational corporations. We also need to ask ourselves if such a system of food production is worth the environmental degradation and the loss of rural businesses and infrastructure," said Swenson.

"The bottom line is that the Agricultural Transition Act will drive down commodity prices, lower farm income and make it difficult for young farmers to enter production agriculture," said Swenson. "We will urge President Clinton to veto the proposal if it reaches his desk."

State Board Protects Farmland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius announced the approval of easement purchases for 13 farms encompassing 1,918 acres of prime farmland.

"Farms in 11 counties will be protected for future generations as a result of Thursday's actions by the State Agricultural Land Preservation Board," said Brosius, who chairs the board.

The Farmland Protection Program was initiated in 1989 with a $100 million bond issue approved by Pennsylvania voters. The program allows the state and counties to purchase development rights — referred to as easements — to guarantee that farms remain agricultural land.

Including easements approved today, 595 farms in 31 counties will have joined the program or had easements approved, protecting 74,161 acres.

In addition, the board voted to approve a 1996 allocation of $31 million to the 40 participating counties. This is the greatest annual allocation of funding in the program's history.

Following is a list of the 11 properties approved, including owner, township, acreage, and purchase cost.

We all know that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. And when it comes to harvesting your crop, it's also the most gentle. So our Natural Flow Harvesting System does just that. We mounted the cylinder transversely. This means, that, unlike other combines, your crop never changes direction. And that means that there's less chance of crop damage. Even the unloader tube has been designed so there are no right angles, but a smooth, gentle flow of your crop as it's sent on its way, in a straight line, the best way. The GLEANER® way. Brothersvalley FFA Holds Awards Banquet

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.)—The 57th annual banquet of the Brothersvally FFA Chapter was attended by some 220 members and parents.

Held as always during National FFA Week, the theme was "FFA Leadership For a Lifetime;" a theme enlarged on by guest speaker Mark Heeter, FFA vice-president from the South-Central Region. Margi Erway, vice-president of the North-Central Region also attended.

An international traveler, Heeter drew upon personal travel experiences to encourage other members to grab the limitless opportunities afforded to FFA members. By comparison, these exceed the opportunities of licensed drivers who quickly discover that driving has its limitations, he said.

"With FFA, the sky is the limit," he said, listing, as well, the organization's available financial support.

John M. Cornish II, superintendent of the Berlin-Brothersvalley School District was named the 41st honorary member. The longtime educator first worked in the Rockwood School District of Somerset County before accepting the position of elementary principal at Berlin in 1987. His duties as superintendent began in 1993. Currently, Cornish is enrolled in the doctoral program at the University of Pittsburgh.

Cornish was chosen for the high honor because of his demonstrated desire for students to achieve success in their agriculture projects.

The one-acre corn growing contest gold medals for 160 to 194 bushels per year went to Adam Shaffer, first; Josh Koval, second, and Jonathan Dickey, third.

For achievements at Penn State Activities Week, Bill Swift, state FFA delegate, received a gold medal. Brothersvalley Chapter Scrapbook got a gold medal and Jason Ickes got a silver medal for Livestock Judging.

Pennfoot Helps Improve Athletic Field Traction

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) - It doesn't kick any extra points or score any goals. And unlike some of the athletes it's designed to help, it doesn't have an exclusive shoe contract. But Pennfoot is proving its worth to athletic teams far and wide.

Pennfoot is a mechanical device used by turfgrass specialists in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences to measure the traction of athletic fields. The machine — a wheeled frame that houses a leg and foot asembly, pressure gauge, pistons and a hydraulic pump — is part of a research program designed to improve the safety, consistency and durability of playing fields ranging from football gridirons to soccer pitches.

"We look at athletic field surface characteristics and try to figure out what changes we can make to improve safety," said Andrew McNitt, Penn State agronomy extension associate. "We evaluate how soil characteristics, grass varieties, and mowing height interact to affect traction and surface hardness."

McNitt says research conducted largely by Donald Waddington and J.C. Harper, both retired Penn State professors of agronomy, form the basis for current studies. In one project, the researchers evaluated football fields used for practices and games at 12 high schools. Athletic trainers at these schools kept injury records, and reported that 21 percent of injuries were related to the playing surface.

"These results suggested the need to minimize the chance of injury by improving field conditions," said McNitt. "The study also showed that even though practice fields are used much more than game fields, practice fields receive much less maintenance and are in poorer condition."

Subsequent research has shed some light on what athletic field managers can do to influence a field's impact absorption and traction. "For instance, field hardness can be reduced by increasing soil moisture and turfgrass cover and by aerating to decrease soil bulk density," said McNitt.

Using Pennfoot, scientists have evaluated the traction provided by different turfgrass varieties under different conditions and mowing heights. "In general, the shorter the grass, the greater the density and traction," McNitt said. "But when the grass is mowed shorter, the root mass declines and the roots stay closer to the surface. That may improve traction, but it makes for a weaker stand of grass that may thin out, reducing traction in the long run."

Studies have shown that under research conditions, tall fescue and Kentucky bluegrass provide the highest traction, followed by perennial ryegrass and fine fescue. Researchers also have looked at shoe types, with molded cleats providing the highest traction when conditions are extremely wet or dry, and studded cleats gripping best under intermediate conditions.

"We're also investigating the traction characteristics of fiber-reinforced soils," McNitt said. "We're using recycled carpet and other synthetic fibers, which can stabilize the soil without increasing density or compaction."

What does all this mean for teams and athletic field managers? "The goal is to find the right balance between good traction and safety," said McNitt. "You want the turf to give out just before a player's knee would.

"Also, if your maintenance budget is small, you want a field that's durable and requires few inputs," he said. "At higher levels of competition, teams may tailor their fields to the types of players they have. For instance, if you have a lot of small, fast players, you want more traction. If your players are bigger and slower, you may want less traction to slow the other team down."

Penn State has provided turf expertise and advice to other well-known organizations, including the Philadelphia Eagles and Pittsburgh Steelers. The Nike shoe company also has shown interest in Penn State research and is supporting some studies.

Ultimately, Penn State specialists hope to develop a set of research-based recommendations and safety standards that can guide athletic field managers. "We want to provide construction and maintenance guidelines that will help turfgrass managers to keep playing conditions within an optimal range for safety and performance," McNitt said.

Nutrient Management Program Available

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The Pequea-Mill Creek Project recently received a special grant to encourage nutrient management planning in the project area.

This new program is part of the Pequea-Mill Creek Project's ongoing efforts to implement nutrient management planning by working through fertilizer dealers and crop consultants.

Nutrient management planners, trained and approved through the Pequea-Mill Creek Project, have been providing nutrient management services to their farmer clients over the past four years. Farmers who have an appfoved nutrient management planner prepare a plan for their farm under this program can receive financial assistance to cover the cost of plan preparation.

The plans developed in this new program will be comprehensive plans patterned after the outline of a nutrient management plan in the proposed regulations for the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act. Nutrient management planning has been focusing on "nutrient balance" concerns. According to the proposed regulations, conservation-related components will be included. Manure management and stormwater runoff control practices will be evaluated and best management practices suggested to address existing or potential water contamination sources in the new plans. Although these plans will not be "official" because the regulations have not yet been approved, they will be a good opportunity to learn what may be involved with the time comes.

A group of approved nutrient management planners have been introduced to the new format and is available to provide this type of nutrient management plan in the project area. Personnel from the Pequea-Mill Creek and Lancaster Conservation District will provide assistance to the planners and farmers, as needed, in developing the conservation-related aspects of the plan.

A list of nutrient management planners who are approved in the Pequea-Mill Creek Projects as well as further information on this program can be obtained by contacting Jerry Martin, Pequea-Mill Creek Project, 307B Airport Drive, P.O. Box 211, Smoketown, PA 17576-0211, (717) 396-9423.

Alfalfa, Corn Rotations Boost Yield

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Growers can expect a 10 to 15 percent increase in yield when they plant corn following alfalfa, reported Herb Damsteegt, Northrup King Co. agronomist for Wisconsin. He attributes the yield boost to a combination of improved soil quality, better nutrient availability, and reduced pest pressure.

Corn following another crop consistently yields better than continuous corn. This is especially true for corn following a legume such as alfalfa. Residual nitrogen from the legume is the key.

University research shows nitrogen credits for legumes can be substantial. For example, 70 to 100 percent alfalfa stands provide an average of 150 to 200 pounds of nitrogen. Growers can expect 120 to 160 pounds of nitrogen from a 30 to 70 percent stand. Even poor alfalfa stands will still provide an estimated 100 pounds of nitrogen for use by the rotational crop.

The Northrup King agronomist said that because the alfalfa decomposes slowly, it releases nitrogen and other nutrients throughout the growing season. Experts speculate that these organic nutrients are available to the corn plant longer than commercial fertilizer applications.

In addition to increased yields, corn following alfalfa generally has faster drydown at harvest and demonstrates improved standability over continuous corn. Damsteegt credits these benefits to reductions in disease and some insect pressures. He said that the crop rotation from a legume to a grass, such as corn, breaks the host cycle for many yield-robbing pests.

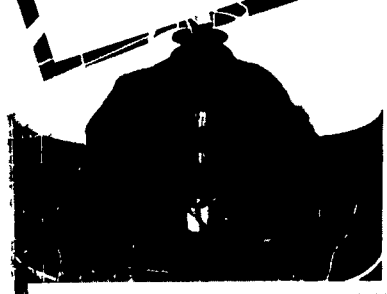
B.U.C.S. OWNER'S REPORT #57

The Word Is Out!

B.U.C.S. Owner's Report
- Increased Storage Capacity
- Better Feed Quality
- Faster Unloading
- Lower Maintenance

The Jamesway Big Jim® B.U.C.S.™
(BOTTOM UNLOADING CONVERSION SYSTEM)
is making big news!



Reports are coming in from B.U.C.S owners everywhere. And they're reporting that their systems are delivering increased storage capacity, higher quality feed, faster unloading and reduced maintenance versus their old systems. Even in silos that had been retired! But don't take our word for it. Here's what your neighbor has to say about their B.U.C.S. System!

OWNER'S REPORT #57

"After using our B U.C.S. for one year, we like the way it has worked overall. There are no doors to change, and little operating cost. We did away with the high maintenance costs and slow discharge rate of the old bottom unloader. B.U.C.S. discharges feed a lot faster."

Nelson Hershey, Mountville, PA

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

At SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. we know a lot about feed storage and handling... we've been in the business since 1908. If your plans call for new feed storage, give us a call... we'd like to contribute to your success!!

FOR A LIMITED TIME, BUY AT 1995 PRICES.

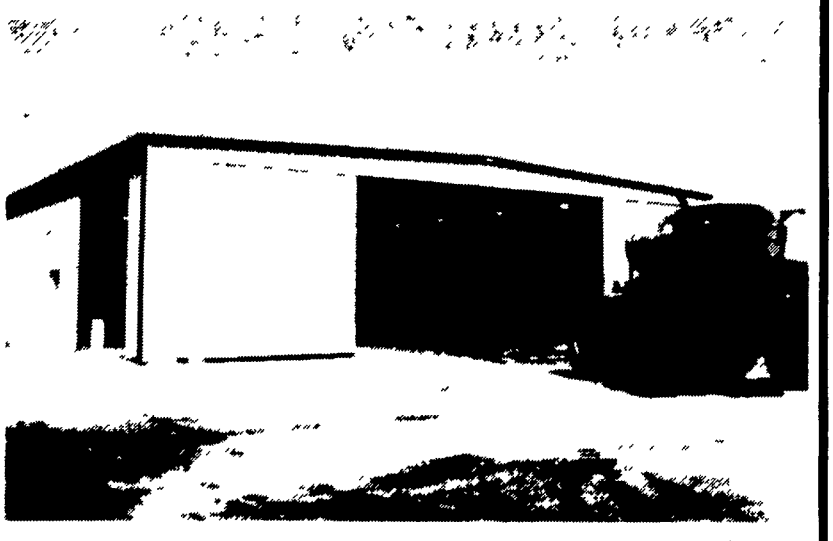
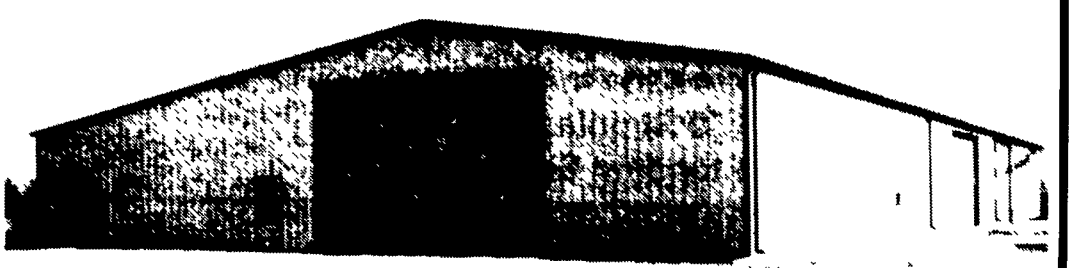
No matter what type of building you're looking for shop, retail store, community building or storage facility - we build durable Butler® rural steel buildings with attractive architectural appeal.

Butler shop buildings are built to give you years of high-use value, low maintenance and maximum comfort. Solid, practical design and rugged steel construction make Butler buildings durable and functional for years to come.

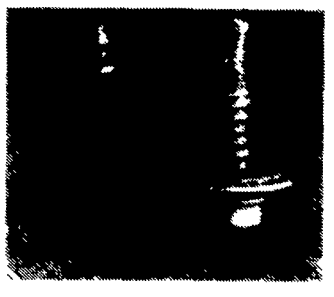




Outside: Your Choice

The appearance of your new building is a critical factor. You just tell us what you'd like and we can build it!

Our structural systems are designed to give you complete freedom in planing the size and shape of your building.



Products that Perform from the Building Systems Industry Leader

You can count on Butler to provide the best materials available.

For example, our standard exterior coating for painted panels is Butler-Cote® 500 FP finishing system, a full strength, 70% Kynar 500® & Hylar 5000® coating. Our coating will resist chalking and fading better than industry standard coatings.

Our fasteners represent another area where Butler offers more for your money. The Scrubolt™ fastener by Butler, available on the Butlerib wall and roof systems and the Shadowrib® wall system, is larger and more resistant to the pull-out forces of wind than industry standard fasteners.

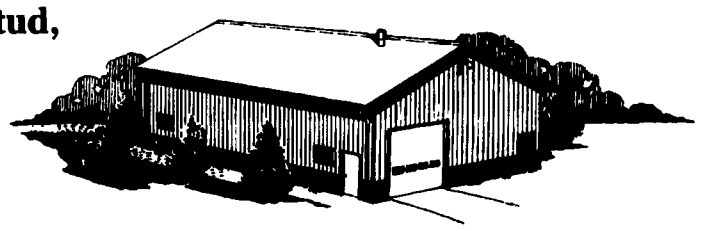
The Building you want. The Lease you need.

Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

HIGH TENSILE FENCE...THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT
BEAVER FENCE SYSTEMS
Darren Peachey, Belleville, PA
"The spring of 1995 was a turning point for our dairy operation as we moved from a high input operation to an intensive grazing system Intensive Grazing has been everything we hoped it would be. Our cows are healthier and we have less labor per cow. The life of our machinery will be longer. All in all it spells higher profits
The first thing we did was talk to other people who were grazing to get ideas that we could incorporate into our dairy operation We hired Beaver Fence Systems to build high tensile fence around the entire farm and we use portable fence to divide the interior into paddocks.
Today's dairy economy does not allow us to keep doing things the way we have always done them We need to keep looking for more profitable ways of producing milk and managing our land. Intensive grazing has made our business more profitable."

Stop By Our Booths 16 & 17 at the PA Farm Show

LLAMAS
LLAMAS
LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer selling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, including Otter Creek Harold.

Cut stall clean-out time by 50% with a Millcreek Compact Spreader.

"The spreading efficiency sure outweighs the price. This is a wonderful machine. I couldn't be more pleased."
EARL SINKS - Brock, Texas

Say "Good-Bye" to back-breaking manure handling and cut stall clean-out time in half. Hook an affordable Milltreek Compact Spreader to your 10 hp garden tractor, take it right to the stall for easy loading. No more wheelbarrow.

Millcreek Spreaders last and last

Since spreaders are our specialty, we put more into each one. For example our 20-year guaranteed floor will never rust or rot. Positive chain drive provides excellent spreading action. BIG DUTCHMAN LAYER AND PULLET CAGE SYSTEM

You get what you pay for.

BIG DUTCHMAN BROILER SYSTEMS

It's interesting that some Poultry Producers who would never buy the cheapest tractor in the lot will buy the cheapest equipment for their birds. If you want equipment that lasts, that costs little to maintain but delivers a lot in every workday, you want what Producers all across the country have already discovered: Big Dutchman, the "Mark of Excellence" and Hershey Equipment, Co "A Step Ahead". You can always find cheaper equipment. But these days, who can afford it?

Corn/Oats Cross First Step Toward Crown Rust Resistance

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The next generation of amber waves of grain may carry the genetic code for not one crop, but two, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist reports.

Howard Rines, with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, has successfully crossed oats, Avena sativa, and corn, Zea mays, in a quest to develop an oat plant more resistant to a crown rust, Puccinia coronata f. sp. avena.

Crown rust is an airborne fungus that causes up to $30 million in crop losses each year in the upper Midwest. The fungus infects the soft tissues of the plant, resulting in reduced yields and lower quality grain.

"Often individual fields have been so badly damaged as to not even be worth harvesting," Rines said.

The most common defense against crown rust is to plant disease-resistant varieties of oats.

"But the fungus mutates or changes its own genetic makeup to get around the resistance bred into oat varieties," Rines said. "It's getting harder and harder to find new sources of resistance to these rusts. That's why we are looking at corn as a new source of resistance for oats."

Corn is not only resistant to crown rust, but has other qualities that scientists want to incorporate into oats, including heat tolerance, improved grain composition and increased productivity.

Working with researchers at the University of Minnesota, Rines decided to try trans-species breeding after reading about English researchers who successfully crossed wheat and corn to produce fertile hybrid wheat plants.

The partial corn-oat hybrids look like ordinary oat plants, but contain up to eight corn chromosomes. "These partial hybrids were by far the widest combination of crop species of which we are aware to be fertile," Rines said.

Ironically, the disease resistance trait the scientists had hoped to incorporate into oats was not among the corn genes passed on to the first generation of oat-corn hybrids.

Undaunted, the scientists have shifted their focus to discovering how they can "turn on" genes that are carried over from the parent lines to get the desired traits expressed.

A report on Rine's work is featured in the February issue of Agricultural Research, the monthly magazine of the Agricultural Research Service.

Be Precise When Driving In Fields

COLUMBUS, Ohio — "Precision traffic" may sound like a sophisticated new way to fight soil compaction. In reality, it's as sensible as driving a pickup truck down the road, said an Ohio State University agricultural engineer.

Randall Reeder said farmers can control soil compaction by driving farm equipment down the same paths, just as they would drive a vehicle down a highway. That way, compaction is restricted to traffic paths in the field while crops grow in compaction-free zones.

"Using roads, streets and highways is a form of precision traffic," Reeder said. "If there are benefits in driving in these 'precise' paths off-farm, then the benefits should be even greater on-farm."

Precision traffic is another term for "controlled traffic," which is one prescription for protecting soils from the downward pressure of heavy equipment. Farmers using ridge-till systems are most familiar with the concept because they confine field traffic to between the ridges where crops are planted.

Reeder likes to show a photograph of the dramatic results of precision traffic from a ridge-tilled field in northwestern Ohio. Soils dug from the trafficked path are hard, caked clods, while samples from cropped soils are smooth and granular.

Precision traffic also helps root growth, Reeder said. A Purdue University study showed the root mass in soil between rows without traffic was about three times greater than it was between rows with traffic.

Precision traffic requires adjusting wheels of all heavy farm equipment so they run in the same paths, Reeder said. Planters, drills and combine headers must all be the same width or multiples of that width.

An ideal system uses eight-row equipment with single tires on all machines. This results in two tracks for every 20-foot strip, which compacts only one-fifth of the soil, leaving most of the field in good shape for root growth. If dual tires are used on the combine, 30 percent of the field will be compacted. The latter system uses four tracks for every eight rows.

Compaction problems are a sign of the times, given today's larger acreages and heavier machinery compared to a generation ago, Reeder said. Add to that the pressures to start field work earlier when soils may be too wet to support heavy equipment.

Entomologist Recognized

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Department of Agriculture entomologist Dr. Alfred G. Wheeler Jr. has been named as the 1996 recipient of the L.O. Howard Distinguished Achievement Award by the eastern branch of the Entomological Society of America.

The award was presented to Wheeler at the society's annual meeting, held in Williamsburg, Va., from Feb. 23-28.

"Dr. Wheeler's work has helped to limit crop losses due to insect damage in Pennsylvania," Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius said. "He is most deserving of this recognition by his peers in the scientific community."

In order to be considered for the award, nominees must have meritoriously contributed to the advancement of entomology — the study of insects — and be members of the eastern branch of the Entomological Society.

Wheeler has been an entomologist with the department's Bureau of Plant Industry for the past 25 years. He received a bachelor's in biology from Grinnell College in 1966 and a doctorate in entomology from Cornell University in 1971.

He has published more than 230 articles, six books and book chapters, and numerous extension and "in-house" publications. He also has served as editor of Regulatory Horticulture, a grower's magazine published semiannually by the bureau.

Emu Expo Set

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Emu Farmers' Association (PEFA) will be hosting its first Emu Expo & Trade Show on Saturday, March 16, at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

An annual membership meeting is scheduled prior to the event from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., with the Expo running from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is invited to attend this very informative event to learn all about the emu industry, past, present and future. Guest speakers for the day will be Tom Murphy, president of the American Emu Association, and Mark Jay Rosenfeld, Ph.D., president of Ratite Alternatives, Inc.

One of the highlights of this event will be an "Emu Food Court," where attendees can purchase emu meat prepared in a variety of ways for lunch and dinner. Additionally, there will be many vendors on hand, displaying emu oil personal care products, emu leather products, novelty items, and commercial support supplies of purchase. Commercial vendors may include feed mills, incubator manufacturers, as well as emu cooperatives.

Guest speaker is Tom Murphy, president of the American Emu Association. Murphy, 35, of Killdeer, N.D. is a third generation rancher — commercial corssbred cattle (a 600-head cow-calf operation), quarter horses and, since 1992, the American emu. The Murphy ranch has 12 breeder pair and and eight pair of emu yearlings, a small operation by industry definition.

Murphy, who is a steer-wrestling member of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, took the six-year-old, 6,000-member American Emu Association (AEA) "by the horns" in July 1995. He previously had served on the AEA board of directors. He and his wife Naomi were instrumental in starting the North Dakota Emu Association.

The new president is active in moving the industry toward a more politically informed and involved organization, working with agricultural committees, legislators, state commissions, and departments on issues of concern to the emu industry.

The second speaker featured at the Spring Emu Expo will be Mark Jay Rosenfeld, Ph.D., president of Ratite Alternatives, Inc., Salt Lake City, Utah, and president of Ratite Reproduction and Nutrition Research, Inc., West Jordan, Utah. Rosenfeld's interests include ratite nutrition, reproduction, molecular (DNA) genetics and marketing. Rosenfeld holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Utah, a master's from The University of British Columbia (zoology: physiology and genetics), and a doctorate from the University of Utah (biology, molecular biology, biochemistry, and genetics). He has published many written works on the subjects of emu nutrition, calcium and egg production, use of chromosomes in fisheries, biochemical genetics, and hybridization experiments.

Rosenfeld will share his theory of kinship of emu to dinosaurs that originates in the remote past. His presentation at the Emu Expo will ask the question: could these large flightless animals be living dinosaurs instead of birds? Rosenfeld will also discuss his studies of ratite genetics and nutritional needs.

Registration is $20 per person. To register in advance, call (215) 234-8174 ro receive a form.

Agco Launches Precision Farming System

ATLANTA, Ga. — Agco Corporation (NYSE:AG), which pioneered the use of precision farming in Europe, has announced that it will introduce Fieldstar", an advanced precision farming system, for use in its 1997 North American combine models.

"The Fieldstar system, which is proprietary to to Agco Corporation, has been developed to meet the specific needs of the North American farmer. We are excited about the opportunities this next-generation product will offer," said Jerry Weaver, general marketing manager. "Agco's customers will benefit from our experience and success in Europe. We will be able to provide an advanced production research tool that focuses on the end result, the producer's bottom line."

Agco's Fieldstar system is being tested in North America on Gleaner® and Massey Ferguson® brand combines for introduction later this year.

Fieldstar measures the weight of the crop flowing through the combine, using a unique measurement system which does not require direct contact with the crop. As the combine moves through the field, the sensor tracks yield variations. Using satellites for positioning information, Fieldstar produces yield maps farmers can use to make input decisions regarding seed rate and fertilizer application.

Forest Landowners Conference Set

MONROEVILLE (Allegheny Co.)—Anyone who owns woodland or is interested in good forest land management should plan to attend the Western Pennsylvania Forest Landowners Conference, scheduled for Monroeville at the Palace Inn on Saturday, March 23.

Experts from Penn State's School of Forest Resources, the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, and the Pennsylvania Game Commission will discuss good forest stewardship, including basic forestry, managing land to improve wildlife habitat, wise harvest management, and tax implications of timber sales.

The Penn State School of Forest Resources, Cooperative Extension Service, the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, and the Westmoreland Woodlands Improvement Association are cosponsoring this meeting to help private landowners better manage their valuable forest resource.

Pennsylvania has more forest landowners than any other state in the nation. Pennsylvanians of all types own forest land for all kinds of reasons, from recreation, to hunting, to timber harvest. Pennsylvania forests also produce more valuable hardwood timber than any other state in the nation, making forestry a big industry in the state. In fact the world looks to Pennsylvania forests as the source of some of the finest black cherry, red oak, white oak, white ash and tulip poplar timber. However, unlike many other timber producing states, this valuable resource is owned by many private landowners, not by large timber companies.

Sooner or later the landowner will be approached with an offer to buy the timber. Since most forest landowners are not in the timber industry they are at a disadvantage when faced with the decision of whether or not to sell timber and for how much money. A careful timber harvest can actually improve overall forest management while a poorly executed harvest can do considerable damage. The forest landowners meeting will give you information to help you make intelligent, informed decisions about your forest management objectives and how you can best manage the woodlot for your own goals, whether those goals are financial, recreational, or both. There is a $15 registration fee for preregistration by Monday, March 18, or $20 at the door registration.

To register or for more information, contact the Westmoreland County Office of Penn State Extension at (412) 837-1402.

Mifflin County Holstein Club Meets

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

MCVEYTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — Members and friends of the Mifflin County Holstein Club recently met for the group's annual dinner meeting, held at the McVeytown Fire Hall.

In addition to conducting club business and elect directors to its board, participants heard from guest speaker Sean Jones, a Maryland Holstein breeder who talked about his 600-cow dairy operation.

In club business, Darvin W. Yoder, Vernon Yoder and Bill Sellers were elected to serve as members of the county club board of directors.

Lowell Peachey presented awards on behalf of the club to Edwin Glick, of Glickdale Farm, in Belleville for having the club's highest BAA; to Darvin Yoder, of Reedsville, for outstanding service and leadership in working with the club's junior age members.

In other business, Paul Neer, show committee chairman, said the past year's club Summer Classic Sale had the highest average sale price compared to seven other counties. The average price was $1,420 with a total of $71,000 for consignors.

Neer said that, since the sale, he followed up on many of the cows sold and received good reports from buyers.

In other news, Neer said that of the 87 dairy animals exhibited in the open and youth divisions of the 1995 Mifflin County Youth Fair, 69 were exhibited by youth. The club sponsored $1,000 in premiums and trophies for the event.

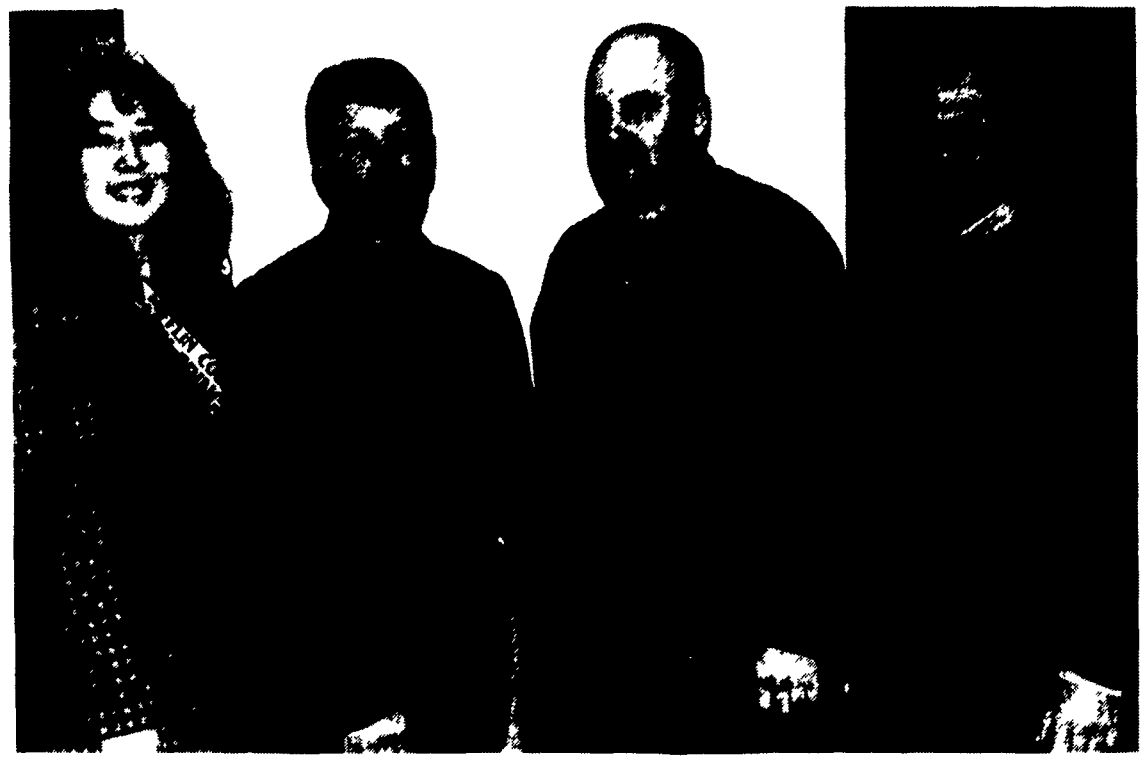
Darvin Yoder gave a report on the junior membership program. He thanked the club for helping to send five junior members to Williamsport for the recent state Holstein convention, and also said that three junior members competed at Penn State in judging, with Andy Reed placing first in judging and second in reason-giving. Mike Kline, of McVeytown, earned a spot on the state judging team.

Yoder also said that Sue Sellers of Belleville deserved credit for her guidance and leadership serving as coach.

In other junior members news, Yoder said he hopes to form a county dairy bowl team this year.

Darren Peachey, of Belleville, who represents the club by serving as a board director for the state Hosltein Association, gave an overview of news items of importance to members.

He said that the county is to be giving a Daphne Marthouse print during the next convention; that Bill Nichol, executive director of the state association, has announced he will retire in 1997; and that Peachey's term as a state director is soon to end.



From the left, Mifflin County Dairy Princess Diane Yoder helps to congratulate those honored by the Mifflin County Holstein Club, Ed Glick for high herd BAA, Darvin Yoder for outstanding service, and Vernon Yoder, who is a new board member.

In other business, Kenneth Raney, PHA director of member service, told the group that overseas buyers are looking for pedigree bulls. Buyers in Egypt, Spain and Mexico want bred heifers, he said.

He also announced that the PHA Spring Showcase Sale is to be held March 22 at the PHA Middletown farm.

Raney also congratulated the

Potato Late Blight Invades Del. Farm

NEWARK, Del. — One notices the stench of the rotting potato field, even before the bare stalks. Something is amiss. A few stalks, limp leaves barely hanging on, give the impression that there is still a struggle for life. Others, completely stripped of leaves, foretell the fate. This desolate field is testimony to a potato late blight infestation.

By decimating Ireland's food supply, potato late blight also decimated Ireland's population. From 1845 to 1860, one million Irish starved to death. Another 1.5 million emigrated to escape the potato famine.

Potato late blight, caused by the fungus Phytophthora infestans, is still around and still just as threatening to the potato crop. Since 1992, severe outbreaks of potato late blight have occurred in the United States. In 1995, the blight invaded a Delaware potato farm.

The high drama in Delaware's agricultural world began last June when a helicopter pilot noticed a diseased potato field from the air. A quick phone call brought Joanne Whalen, integrated pest management (IPM) specialist at the University of Delaware, to the scene. Whalen suspected late blight. But since her training is in insect pests, she called on cooperative extension's plant pathologist, Bob Mulrooney, to identify the fungus microscopically in his laboratory.

Aware that late blight had been appearing in U.S. potato fields, Mulrooney, with the cooperation of the Delaware Potato Board, had alerted potato growers that the warm, humid weather conditions were perfect for the proliferation of the late blight fungus. Most growers had begun a preventive fungicide spray program. Unfortunately, one farmer had not.

The virulence of the fungus is phenomenal. And with farms in close proximity to one another, the disease can spread quickly.

"Just one infected seed piece can produce enough spores to destroy a 50-acre field if the weather conditions are favorable for development," Mulrooney said. "In a matter of just a couple of days, the plants will be wiped out, the leaves a slimy black mess."

Because the fungus grows best in moderately warm temperatures and high humidity, the weather is a good indicator of when late blight will strike. Monitoring weather conditions proved to be a feasible way to keep a watch for the disease last summer.

Mulrooney said the Delaware Potato Board supported a full-blown scouting program from the start. Last winter and early spring, Mulrooney and Whalen sent potato growers several mailings alerting them to the possible problem and the control program. A meeting was held to provide last-minute control information and to explain the use of weather-monitoring stations and a late blight information hotline. One hundred percent of 1995 checkoff funds went to buy computerized weather monitors and support a hotline. Marty Spellman, cooperative extension IPM research associate, maintained the monitors and collected data twice a week from six locations across the state.

"We carefully picked the sites for the weather monitors," Spellman said. "We set them up where the late blight would be likely to occur first. We chose damp areas near creeks and ponds, and low-lying areas that don't dry out very well. These are the hot spots for the fungus."

Spellman down-loaded data onto a portable computer and carried the information back to the university. There, Mulrooney used WISDOM, a computer program, to analyze the information and forecast the probability of late blight.

"On June 22 to 23, we had 37 hours of weather favorabvle for late blight infection," Mulrooney said. "The temperature and humidity were in the correct ranges. That is when information was put on the hotline with a recommendation to be sure fungicides were in place. Unfortunately, one farmer did not follow the spray schedule, and six days later late blight was discovered in his fields. The fungus did not spread to other farms, so the preventive measures did work."

Mulrooney said the hotline and weather monitoring for potato late blight will continue this coming season thanks to continued Potato Board funding and IPM program support.

"It's not likely that we will have any greater risk of infection this summer," Mulrooney said, "because spores do not overwinter. But we will still monitor and recommend preventive spray programs because the fungus can overwinter on volunteer plants that may sprout from infected tubers. We don't know that this occurred, but we have to be on the alert."

Last summer, the potato late blight fungus threatened Delaware farms. Marty Spellman, IPM research associate, took readings from weather monitors that predicted the likelihood of an outbreak and alerted farmers to use preventive programs.

Ag Secretary Addresses Conservation Conference

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—Maryland Department of Agriculture Secretary Lewis R. Riley recently discussed the future of Maryland's conservation programs at the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation District's Winter Meeting on January 21 in Annapolis.

Picking up on the conference's theme, "Downsizing Government: The Impacts and Realities," Secretary Riley provided a packed house with an update on Maryland's financial outlook for next year.

"First, I want to tell you that state budget dollars for agriculture are shrinking," said Riley.

"This does not mean that the future is filled with gloom and doom. It simply means that we are going to have to do things differently from now on," Riley said. "We at Maryland Department of Agriculture must do our part to adjust to the current budget adjustments."

Secretary Riley went on to discuss the ways in which his department has adjusted to a shrinking budget. He emphasized, however, that support for the state's 24 soil conservation districts—who carry out natural resources protection programs at the local level—will not be cut in fiscal 1997.

"That's because over the years, districts have proven themselves to be a cost-efficient and effective means of addressing non-point source pollution issues. No one on my staff or in the Governor's office is interested in fixing something that is not broken," said Riley.

He did, however, emphasize that in the future, districts are not going to be able to carry on business as usual.

Riley's advice to districts seeking to rethink their operations included recommendations on establishing priority zones for installation of best management practices. He also suggested that district offices investigate the possibility of "regionalizing" their technical staffing resources.

Establishing partnerships with the private sector is one of the most promising new ways of carrying out the state's natural resource protection programs, according to Riley. Citing the success of the Maryland Nutrient Management Certification Program, that was developed in cooperation with private industry, Riley added that the legislature is interested in opportunities to privatize the technical assistance that districts have traditionally provided for installation of conservation best management practices such as contour strips, animal waste facilities, and grassed waterways.

"As part of our capital budget for conservation districts, the legislature has targeted $50,000 for a pilot program to look into the privatization issue," Riley said.

Md. Publishes Vegetable Growers Guide

WESTMINSTER, Md. — To help commercial vegetable growers make managerial decisions, the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service has just released the newly revised comprehensive guide, "Commercial Vegetable Production."

Not intended to be used by home gardeners, this bulletin contains recommendations to help commercial growers keep up with the rapidly changing vegetable industry and make decisions about plant varieties, pesticides, and fertilizer applications, cultural practices and equipment.

Incorporating new information for the mid-Atlantic area, "Commercial Vegetable Production" contains some expanded sections on no-till culture of pumpkins, drip irrigation, and herbicide rotations. With its easy-reference format, the commercial vegetable grower will be able to find recommendations quickly and keep a record of spray and pesticide registration numbers.

To request your copy or for additional information contact the Carroll County Extension office at (410) 848-4611. This publication costs $6. There is an additional shipping charge for out-of-state orders.

Manage The Unpredictable By Managing Risk

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa — Since no one can predict the weather, industry experts advise farmers not to depend on one hybrid to cover the unexpected during the growing season.

Instead, farmers should manage their risk by selecting the best package of hybrids with a diverse set of genetics for their operation.

Ray Riley, northcentral Corn Belt research director for Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., said growers need to analyze multiyear and regional information before selecting a package of corn hybrids.

"For example, since 1995 conditions varied greatly, farmers will want to look at several years' worth of data on the top hybrids to see how they perform over a wide range of environments in various conditions," Riley said.

Each hybrid has its strengths and weaknesses. Farmers need to consider soil-types, disease, or insect problems and other conditions specific for each field.

"Disease and pest pressures differ from one field to the next," said Dr. Bill Dolezal, a plant pathologist with Pioneer. "That's why Pioneer recommends planting a package of hybrids. It's critical to plant a hybrid that has the traits that fit the agronomic pressures specific to that field. Very rarely will growing stresses and field conditions be the same for all of a grower's acreage."

Walker Kirby, a University of Illinois Cooperative Extension pathologist, said farmers should not toss out a hybrid for next year just because they had problems with it this season.

"Growing conditions were so unusual in 1995 and had such a huge effect on yields. I doubt whether growers will see similar results next year with these same hybrids."

Choosing a perfect mix of hybrids is made easier with the volumes of information now available about each hybrid. Each year Pioneer conducts thousands of side-by-side comparisons to provide more information for customers.

"We know the expected performance of a hybrid across a range of environments and over a series of years because of our extensive on-farm testing," said Riley.

The company's information management system enables performance data to quickly be translated into data farmers and seed professionals can use for decision making. Farmers can work with their seed sales representative to examine a hybrid's performance over time and across geographic locations to see if it is a good match for their farms.

Mifflin County Holstein Club Meets

Mifflin County Holstein Club on its successful summer sale.

In other action, Michael Ammon, club president was in charge of the meeting while Darvin Yoder presented the minutes of the 1995 meeting and gave the treasurer's report.

Also speaking was county Dairy Princess Diane Yoder.

Guest speaker Jones gave an informative talk and presented a glimpse of the ups and downs of managing a 600-cow dairy operation, run by a family corporation that includes Sean, two brothers and their parents. Ten months prior the favmily had moved their 400-cow herd from New Jersey to Maryland, expanding in the process.

"We set goals for the various parts of the operation," he said. "Our cows are milking 77 pounds now. Our goal is 80. Right now our max cell count is 200,000. Our goal is 150,000. Our herd average of 250,000 on 400 head has dropped since the expansion."

Jones also said their goal for number of cows is 1,200. Jones' father, a milking equipment dealer, designed the double-12 parlor for one-man milking. The operation milks three times per day at a rate of 80 cows per hour.

He also covered herd health, manure management, reproduction, and the use of a computerized identification system. He also said their farm has more cows than their town has people.

Tractor, Machinery Certification Course Set

COAL TOWNSHIP (Northumberland Co.) — Any boy or girl 14 or 15 years of age who is planning to work off their family-owned farm must successfully complete a tractor certification course to legally work for someone other than on their own family farm. Thirteen-year-olds may take the course and test but will not receive a certificate until they reach 14.

A certification course is planned for the multicounty area (including Columbia, Montour, Northumberland, Snyder, and Union) to begin at 6 p.m. on March 19 at Deerfield Ag and Turf just off the Watsontown Exit of I-180. The course will continue for seven or eight weeks.

Videos, hands on, and practical driving experiences will be featured. Vernon Brose, retired Northumberland extension agent, will teach the course.

Please call your local Penn State cooperative extension office to register as soon as possible (there may be a $5 fee for course materials).

Conference Selects Tomato Growing Champions

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The state's top tomato growers were honored recently during the "tomato day" portion of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference at the Hershey Convention Center.

The State Champion Tomato Growers' Club annually recognizes growers who produce outstanding yields of tomatoes for processing in 1995, sponsored by Penn State and Furman Foods.

In Class 1, machine harvest size, 60 or more acres, Cliff Charles, Lancaster, won the award for the highest tomato yield. Charles harvested 3,484.9 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 107 acres for a 32.5 tons per acre average yield.

For Charles, varieties grown included Early Pear, Peto 696, Ohio 8245, Ox 42 and 88, and Heinz 9422, 9423, and 9478. The 338 plug transplants grown in his own greeenhouses were planted with a Lannen plug planter at a population of 13,000 plants per acre. The double rows were planted from April 29 through May 25 on 66-inch centers with a 15-inch spacing in the row and 19 inches between rows.

Tomatoes are rotated in a three-year program with corn or small grains in double-crop soybeans. The rotation consists of tomatoes-corn-small grains. Lime and fertilizer were applied according to soil test. Some fields had fall application of manure and, if additional nitrogen was required in some fields during the growing season, calcium nirate was applied.

Charles also made use of various herbicide treatments. Fruit was harvested from Aug. 7 to Sept. 9.

In the Class 2, machine harvest size, 40-59 acres, winner was R. Stewart Ramm, Lock Haven. Ramm harvested 1,398 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 41.6 acres for a 33.6 tons per acre average yield.

Ramm used Peto 696, Heinz 9478, and LaRossa varieties, grown from tray transplants at a population of 10,250 plants per acre and transplaned on May 25-29. The tomatoes were not grown on beds and the single rows were spaced five feet from center and plants were 10 inches in the row.

Tomatoes are roated in a three-year program with corn or small grains in double-crop soybeans. Rotation is tomatoes-corn-wheat/soybeans. Lime was broadcast at a rate of 1 to 1.5 tons per acre and fertilizer was used in three different formulations, depending on soil tests. Tomatoes were sidedressed with liquid nitrogen based on nitrogen test at 30 pounds per acre. A high phosphorous starter fertilizer (10-54-4) at 15 pounds per acre was applied in the water at transplant time.

Weeds and insects were controlled with a combination of herbicides and insecticides. First harvest was Sept. 22 and last harvest was Oct. 3.

In the Class 3 machine harvest, 25-39 acres size, winner was the Nissley Brothers, Mount Joy. They harvested 972.5 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 25 acres for a 38.9 tons per acre average yield.

Locally grown transplants of Peto 696 were planted from May 24 through May 27. The tomatoes were grown in single rows at a population of 10,500 plants per acre with a five-foot spacing between rows and 10 inches in the row.

A four-year crop rotation is followed, which includes corn in year one, soybeans in year two, corn in year three, and tomatoes in year four. Fifteen tons per acre of steer manure was applied in the fall of 1994 and soil/tissue tests indicated no additional fertilizer was necessary.

Weeds were controlled with a preplant herbicide, and diseases were controlled by various combinations. Fruit was harvested from Aug. 30 through Sept. 13.

Fred Kistler, Bloomsburg, won the Class 4 machine harvest, 15-24 acre harvest size. Kistler harvested 772 tons of usable fruit for Furman on 20 acres for a 38.6 tons per acre average yield.

Heinz 9478 and Peto 696 transplants were grown at a population of 11,000 plants per acre and transplanted on May 18. The tomatoes were not grown on beds, and the single rows were spaced 56 inches from center. Plants were 11 inches in the row.

A three- or four-year crop rotation is followed, which includes soybeans. Soil pH was adjusted and fertilizer was banded to provide 80 pounds nitrogen, 100 pounds phosphorous, and 250 pounds potassium per acre prior to planting.

Weeds were controlled with a combination of herbicides. Fungicides were also used.

In the Class 2 hand harvest, 6 to 14 acres size, Robert MacBeth took home the honor. MacBeth, Biglerville, harvested 413 tons of usable fruit for Furman on 14 acres for a 29.5 tons per acre average yield.

Plug transplants of Ohio 7681 were planted on May 6 through May 8 at a population of 8,500 plants per acre. The tomatoes were grown in single rows with a 46-inch spacing between rows and 16 inches in the row.

A four-year crop rotation is followed, which includes sod in year one, wheat in year two, hay in year three, and tomatoes in year four. Nitrogen was applied at 84 pounds per acre, broadcast and plowed down prior to planting. A sidedress application of 8-24-8 at 526 pounds per acre with minor elements was applied after plants were well established.

Weeds were controlled by various herbicides. Insecticides were applied on the same spray schedule as the fungicides.

Reuben K. Esh won the Class 3, hand harvest size, 2-5 acres contest. Esh, Loganton, harvested 52.19 tons of usable fruit on two acres for a 26.1 tons per acre yield.

Esh used Ohio 8245 tomato variety.

Pro Ag's Board Reorganizes

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — Dennis Boyanowski, dairy farmer from Laceyville, has been re-elected president of the Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro Ag). Boyanowski will be starting his third year as president.

During Pro Ag's reorganization meeting held Feb.14 in Tunkhannock, John Pardoe, a dairy farmer from Forksville, was re-elected vice president of Pro Ag.

Other officers re-elected were Yvonne Arnold of Elk Lake (Susquehanna Co.) as secretary and Mrs. Louise Rinker of Sullivan County as treasurer.

Two new directors took their seats on Pro Ag's eight-member board of directors. Kirk Rhone, a dairy farmer from Starruca, becomes the director representing District I (Wayne County). Rhone is a partner in Bucks Dairy Farm in Starruca. John Tewksbury, a dairy farmer from South Auburn, is the new Pro Ag director from District II (Susquehanna County).

The executive committee of Pro Ag consists of President Boyanowski, Vice President Pardoe, Secretary Arnold, Treasurer L. Rinker, Assistant Treasurer J. Tewksbury, and Assistant Secretary Carl Hibbard.

President Boyanowski said, "Pro Ag is still dedicated to improving the welfare of farmers in the rural area. The only way we can improve the welfare of farmers is by implementing a relationship between the cost of producing an agriculture product and the price received by the farmers."

Pro Ag is continuing to work with other farm organizations in an attempt to improve prices to area farmers through the 1995 Farm Bill.

Boyanowski reports that the membership of Pro Ag is now growing in other areas. During 1995, Pro Ag has expanded into Northampton, Berks, Washington, and Westmoreland counties.

PVGA Promotes Research, Elects Directors

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — At the recent Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference and Trade Show, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) voted to provide funds for research and to elect directors.

Research

The PVGA board voted to give $17,500 toward 12 vegetable and small fruit research projects in 1996. This will set a new record for PVGA research funding, equal to about $29 in research funding for each member of the association.

Even though more than $22,000 was approved for research in 1995, the association only spent $16,500 last year because some projects did not require as much funding as expected.

Despite the fact that profits from the 1996 Farm Show were only $10,000, a third of the amount earned at the 1995 Farm Show, the directors decided to use some of the association's reserves that have been accumulating. They believe it is important to maintain the level of research funding.

PVGA will contribute $13,000 to vegetable research. The 10 vegetable projects will be funded in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program, which will be contributing an additional $19,000.

PVGA will contribute $4,500 toward two small fruit projects at Penn State University.

The 12 projects and their objectives are:

• Development of cold tolerant tomatoes for Pennsylvania, M. Foolad, Penn State University, $3,000, to evaluate chilling tolerance of approximately 40 tomato genotypes at different developmental stages; to construct genetics and breed populations by intercrossing between chilling tolerant and chilling sensitive genotypes; and to eventually develop new tomato germplasm which are chilling tolerant and adapted to Pennsylvania conditions. Other important horticultural characteristics such as disease and insect resistance, earliness, and fruit quality will be incorporated in the new germplasm.

• Disease control for snap beans, pumpkins and tomatoes, A. MacNab, Penn State University, $8,000, to evaluate soil treatments for root rot control; to evaluate resistance and tolerance to selected diseases affecting cucurbits and peppers; to identify disease control thresholds for tomatoes; to assess the value of resistance to early blight in tomatoes; to maintain and operate a tomato disease forecast system in several areas of Pennsylvania, and to evaluate processing tomatoes varieties, for tolerance to ripe fruit rots.

• Development of strategies to utilize biocontrols, with insect growth regulators in greenhouse vegetable production, M. Orzolek and C. Thomas, Penn State University, $1,000, to develop a strategy to use Amblyseius cucumeris in conjunction with Azadirachtin to control western flower thrips.

• Maximizing quality pumpkin production: a comparison of bareground, no-till, and plasticulture systems, M. Orzolek, Penn State University, $4,000, to evaluate the effect of raised beds, two different plastic mulches, and drip irrigation on pumpkin yields and quality; to evaluate the effect of a no-till system (pumpkins transplanted into annual ryegrass) with drip irrigation on pumpkin yields and quality and to evaluate for comparison the effect of a conventional bare ground production system with drip irrigation on pumpkin yields and quality.

• Nonchemical weed and insect management in cabbage, M. Orzolek, Penn State University, $3,000, to compare white clover, annual ryegrass, a mixture (2 pounds clover and 5 pounds ryegrass per acre) and bare ground treatments for their effects on growth and yield of cabbage transplants and to compare treatments for their effects on insect damage and disease incidence.

• Nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and gypsum rates for tomatoes as related to nutrient balance and efficient production, C. Smith, Penn State University, $4,000, to determine the most effective rates of nitrogen and phosphate for optimum growth and yields, to determine if higher potash rates are a major factor in restricting calcium uptake, to evaluate several rates of gypsum, and to study the role of gypsum in increasing yields.

• Sweet Corn IPM for Pennsylvania, S. Spangler, S. Fleischer and D. Calvin, Penn State University, $4,000, to maintain and improve the existing infrastructure that monitors pests of sweet corn ears and provide this information to growers in a timely fashion through the Vegetable Insect Newsletter and the 1-800-PENN-IPM line with a FAX-on-demand option, to establish a sweet corn IPM site on the PSU Entomology "Home Page" of the Internet/World Wide Web, and to emphasize the pheromone based approach to ECB monitoring using commercial lures as much as possible.

• Evaluation of the potential of trichoderma as a biocontrol agent in snap bean root rot, T. Bjorkman, G. Abawi, G. Harman, Cornell Univ., $2,500, to evaluate the use of the Trichoderma to control root rots in snap beans.

• 1996 processing sweet corn variety yield trial, M. Brubaker, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting, $2,000, to record and document yield and key agronomic traits for processed varieties of sweet corn.

• 1996 processing pea variety yield trial, M. Brubaker, Brubaker Agronomic Consulting, $1,000, to record and document yield and key agronomic traits for processed varieties of peas.

• Bramble genotypes for Pennsylvania, B. Goulart and K. Demchak, Penn State Univ., $2,800, to evaluate newly developed germplasm of primocane fruiting raspberries and upright thornless blackberries in order to make appropriate recommendations for the Pennsylvania berry industry.

• Early strawberry cultivators for eastern Pennsylvania, B. Goulart, G. Perry and K. Demchak, Penn State, $2,500, to evaluate newly developed early strawberry cultivars in eastern Pennsylvania.

Officers, Directors Re-Elected

Six members of the board of directors — Richard Pallman, Barron Hetherington, Robert Amsterdam, John Mason, William Reynolds, and Wilfred Richards — were re-elected for three-year terms at the annual meeting of the general membership of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association.

Following the annual meeting, the board met briefly and re-elected the current officers: Richard Pallman, president; Robert Trax, first vice president; Barron Hetherington, second vice president; and Boyd Mertz, secretary-treasurer. All were re-elected for a one-year term. It is customary for the president and the two vice presidents to serve two consecutive one-year terms.

Richard Pallman has been a director since 1984. He and his two brothers grow several hundred acres of greenwrap tomatoes in Clarks Summit. They also have a large pick-your-own (PYO) strawberry operation besides raising and dressing turkeys for direct consumer sales during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. The three brothers and their father are Master Farmers. Pallman has served as a member of the state board of directors of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, as chairman of Farm Bureau's labor committee, and as vice chairman of the Vegetable Marketing and Research Board.

Robert Trax has served as a director since 1989 and also is a member of the Vegetable Marketing and Research Board. The Trax family operates a large farm market, orchard, greenhouse, and vegetable business in Finleyville in suburban Pittsburgh.

Barron Hetherington farms in partnership with his two brothers as B&R Farms in Ringtown. The recently named Master Farmers grow 460 acres of field corn, hay and grain, plus 22 acres of vegetables and 12 acres of PYO strawberries. He serves on the Schuylkill Conservation District board and on the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Wildlife Crop Damage Committee. Hetherington is a second-generation PVGA director who has been on the board since 1987.

Boyd Mertz served as president of the association before becoming secretary-treasurer, a position he has held since 1971. He operated a one-and-one-half-acre greenhouse range in Northumberland where he grew primarily spring and fall greenhouse tomatoes plus geraniums and flowering hanging baskets in the spring. He recently sold the business to his son-in-law. Mertz also serves on the Vegetable Marketing and Research Board and is a Master Farmer.

Robert Amsterdam of Mechanicsburg is president of Habets Trading USA, an importer and exporter of fresh vegetables. He is also involved in the sales of local vegetables for several Pennsylvania farmers. Amsterdam has served as a director since 1993.

John Mason, along with his wife and two sons, operate a large farm market in Erie. they grow sweet corn, snap beans, strawberries, tomatoes, and numerous other vegetables on their Lake City farm along with juice grapes. Mason has been a PVGA director since 1981 and served as president of the association in 1986 and 1987.

William Reynolds is a dairy and vegetable farmer from Waynesboro first elected to the board in 1995 for a one-year term. He sells his produce retail through local farmers' markets and wholesale through produce auctions.

Wilfred Richards has served as a director since 1982. He is a fresh market vegetable grower from Dalton. He retails his produce at the Cooperative Farmers' Market in Scranton, where he serves as president of the market. Richards is vice president of the Berwick Vegetable Cooperative and is active in local extension affairs. Besides farming, he also operates a school bus service and is a director of the Pennsylvania School Bus Association.

Life Member

Warren Thompson has been named a new life member of the association by the board of directors. Life membership is an honorary membership reserved for those individuals who have served the association in an outstanding and exceptional manner, going beyond the call of duty in devoting themselves to the work of the association.

Thompson, a former greenwrap tomato grower from Clarks Summit, served as director of the association for 20 years, from 1974 to 1994. He also served as president from 1980 to 1981.

Directors Complete Institute

"Positioning Your Cooperative For Change" was the title of the 1996 Pennsylvania Cooperative Director Institute attended by Phil Ake, of Emu Marketing Unlimited and Bernie Redlawsk.

The 12th in a series of cooperative director institutes that began in 1983 was held at the Nittany Lion Inn on the campus of Penn State University. More than 45 directors from 15 different cooperative organizations serving members in 10 states participated.

The director school is sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State University's Cooperative Business Education and Research Program (CBERP).

More than 20 leaders from educational, cooperative, and government organizations kept the participants challenged throughout the three-day program. Keynote speakers included Dr. Graham Spanier, recently appointed president of Penn State University; Charles Brosius, secretary of agriculture for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; and Dr. Christopher Peterson, associate professor of agricultural economics at Michigan State University.

Herman Brubaker, chairman of the board of Milk Marketing, Inc. (MMI), shared insights gained from his many years of guiding MMI through a number of mergers and strategic challenges. George Steele, former Agway and Farm Credit board member, provided a strong foundation of director basics.

Ag Delegation Visits Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — In its continuing efforts to develop exchange programs and agricultural cooperation with states around the world, the Maryland Department of Agriculture recently hosted a visiting delegation of agricultural officials from Anhui Province in China.

Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley gave his visitors an overview of agriculture in Maryland as well as a tour of the department's laboratories.

The Anhui Minister of Agriculture Zheng Zhi Kuan made a presentation on the highlights of agriculture in his home province and expressed his desire for an expansion of exchanges and agreements in the agriculture sector. Both leaders voiced the belief that they would continue to cooperate and benefit by an exchange of knowledge.

"Anhui Province has been a sister state of Maryland for 15 years. We already have a solid friendship and our Chinese visitors were extremely gracious and forthright in expressing their desire for wider cooperation. This can only help both of our people and expand the trade opportunities for Maryland agriculture," Riley said.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture has exchange programs and agreements of friendly partnership with numerous other states around the world, including many of the emerging democracies in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union.

"As with Anhui Province, we believe that if people can meet and get to know one another, there is no limit as to what we can each learn. I look forward to the continuing development of our agricultural relationship with Anhui," said Riley.

Anhui Province is located in southeast China. Its major agricultural commodities include rice, wheat, sweet potatoes, soybeans, and cotton. In addition, the province has livestock such as hogs, cattle, sheep, poultry and goats. Like Maryland, they also harvest crabs.

"The people in Anhui believe their province holds many good agricultural investment possibilities. This is an opportunity that Marylanders may be able to take advantage of," Riley said.

A Look At British Dairy Farming, Other Practices

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — While the United States may lead the world dairy industry in level of milk production and other related parameters, it's always interesting, and sometimes profitable, to see what dairy people in other countries are doing.

Many years ago, when I led dairy farm tours to Europe, I was impressed by the Blue cattle in Belgium. I even wrote articles about them.

Developed decades ago out of blue Holstein-Friesians, these cows have a highly profitable genetic trait called "double loin." This trait, which was considered an undesirable recessive defect, is that the calves are so big at birth, they must be delivered by Caesarean section.

Now, finally, I hear some Blue cattle are being imported to this country.

I am convinced they will prove as valuable and profitable as the Simmental did when they arrived in the United States in the 1960s.

On a recent trip to Mexico, I saw several outstanding herds, one at the University of Mexico.

Even in Great Britain now, Blue cattle are advertised at bull studs!

But if U.S. dairy farmers adopt this breed, our veterinarians will have to be educated to use Caesarean delivery 90 percent of the time.

Another item that impressed me is that almost all British and European farms with silage have a silage slicer.

Instead of a scoop or fork, a vertical saw device is mounted on the front of a tractor, which sections off pieces from a horizontal silo (e.g., Agbag), much the way a knife slices sausage.

In the process, the rest of the silage isn't disturbed, so the front end of the silo isn't loose, leaving it neat and clean.

Neither secondary fermentation nor molding occurs, a problem common in the United States and one that can cause tremendous losses. The silage slicer also makes loading for feeding from a horizontal silo a fully automatic, one-person operation.

Why hasn't a U.S. machinery dealer imported such a great piece of equipment? It certainly would add profitability to lines like New Holland or John Deere as well as make the lives of dairy farmers over here easier and more profitable.

Another innovative piece of farm equipment is the so-called loading wagon, which people on our farm tours to Europe and Great Britain admired years ago.

A universal multiple-use wagon pulled by a tractor, the loading wagon has one axle or two and comes in several sizes. Some farms had one; bigger farms had several.

With a mowing head in the front and a pickup head in the back, the loading wagon can mow hay or green crops and load them as green chop for silage, haylage or as hay. The live floor reverses for unloading back at the barn.

Since the loading wagon is totally automated and doesn't bale or throw bales, one person alone can make hay or silage. The hay is cut long, blown long into the haymow and unloaded long by a crane for feeding to the cows.

The long hay feeding has the great advantage of totally avoiding rumen acidosis, displaced abomasum and low milkfat test.

The loading wagon has the potential to make life on the dairy farm easier, so why don't we have it here in the United States? Has no U.S. machinery dealer heard of loading wagons or thought of importing or building them here?

But not everything over there is so impressive.

Take the legal actions in London by and against McDonald's. These lawsuits have been going on for five years or more, although probably few people in this country are aware of them. We are so preoccupied with our own notorious court cases.

Activists from Greenpeace allege that McDonald's exploits the welfare of cattle, pigs and chickens.

Since in the United States a major share of the hamburger market is based on dairy cattle, it's a good reason for U.S. dairy farmers to follow the proceedings to protect their own future welfare.

The allegations, which McDonald's is fighting, state: "The menus of the burger chains are based on torture and murder of millions of animals. Most are intensively farmed, with no access to fresh air and sunshine, and no freedom of movement. Their deaths are barbaric — 'humane slaughter' is a myth. We have the choice to eat meat or not, but the 750 million animals massacred for food in Britain each year have no choice at all."

Meanwhile, McDonald's also has published an animal welfare guideline for its suppliers, refusing to purchase from suppliers that do not respect these codes.

The fast-food chain has also tried to switch to free-range eggs, but found the prices double and the costs prohibitive.

In other parts of Europe — Switzerland, for example — cages for laying hens were banned three years ago.

It is now reported that hen numbers have decreased from 3.3 million to 2 million and domestic egg production dropped from 750 million to 642. The difference is being made up with imported eggs, mostly from cage layers!

There is, however, one more bit of good news from Great Britain. They have started an amino acid ration profile service called Rumidaaas, an acronym for ruminant digestible amino acid accounting service.

Milk producers are expected to benefit from such a service.

After analyzing 400 basic dairy ration ingredients and 100 typical total dairy rations, researchers have found that while half only provide the sufficient amounts of lysine, none had enough methionine.

Overall, a dairy ration needs to provide at least 7 percent of the amino acid lysine in the absorbed protein and 2.25 percent methionine for optimum milk production.

Lysine and methionine are the major production-limiting amino acids in dairy cattle feeding. Methionine, which helps reduce ketosis, is a key molecule in metabolic protein transport, moving triglycerides from the liver and improving energy supply for high milk production, thereby also improving reproductive efficiency.

Cows will respond in any stage of lactation, and at least two manufacturers are offering rumen-protected methionine and/or lysine for balancing dairy cow rations.

When given to British cows in early lactation, feeding supplementary lysine and methionine has increased protein contents in milk, total milk yield and net returns per cow per year by more than $120.

Hog Calling Contest To Highlight Open House

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that for the second straight year, a hog calling contest will highlight the Ninth Annual Maryland Department of Agriculture Open House set for March 23 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Our annual open house has become an important event on Maryland's early spring calendar. It is a tremendous day for families to visit our facilities, to learn about agriculture, and to have fun. We have planned numerous activities for people of all ages including our famous hog calling contest, tours of our laboratories, a farm coloring contest, a petting farm, food, entertainment, and more. I urge anyone who has not come to our open house to give it a try. If you come once, you are likely to return," said Riley.

Additional activities at the open house include face painting, craft demonstrations, a hay bale toss and food sampling. Visitors will be able to tour the chemical, weights and measures and plant laboratories and learn about many of the department's other programs.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture is located outside of Annapolis in Parole off of Riva Road at 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD.

For more information on the Open House, call the Maryland Department of Agriculture Open House, Marketing Services, (410) 841-5770.

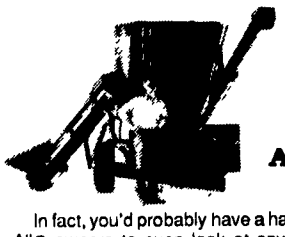
Great Serviceability!

Most Mix-All owners will never buy another.

Model MX125 And Model MX170



In fact, you'd probably have a hard time convincing Gehl Mix-All® owners to even look at anything else. And why should they?

The Mix-All's big 21-inch wide hammermill features 66 reversible thin hammers that cut, rather than pound the feed to deliver a more consistent grind and ensure uniform mixing for a better feed conversion rate.

Gehl's self-contained hydraulic system is designed-in, not added on. It provides the precision of infinitely variable in-feed attachment control to match tractor power for greater grinding capacity. Plus you get fast, smooth, trouble-free unloading with greater reliability.

And a wide variety of options and attachments lets you customize your Mix-All to fit any operation.

YOUR BEST FORAGE BOX VALUE

GEHL
Box Spreaders

Even when it's empty... it's loaded.

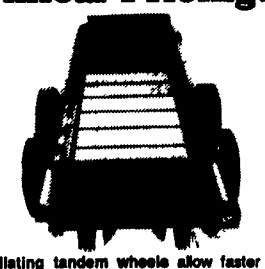
Low profile design means easy loading by skid loader, front end loader or barn cleaner.

Gehl-Tuff Flooring prevents the apron from freezing to the floor, allowing manure to slide out with little resistance. Less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains. One piece construction won't flex under heavy loads.

Extra-strong, T-Bar apron chains with an average tensile strenght of over 23,500 pounds keep the biggest loads moving.

Double Galvanized steel sides are corrosion resistant for long life. One-piece seamless construction won't catch material or leak.

Optional hydraulic endgate rests in front of the beater paddles to secure sloppy loads and keep heaped material out of the beater unit you're ready to spread. An available litter pan reduces spills in the yard or roadway while enhancing the spread distribution.



Oscillating tandem wheels allow faster ground speeds while providing greater flotation. They're standard on the 325-bushel and 425-bushel models and optional on the 250-bushel model.

Twelve extra wide one-piece beater paddles are symmetrically positioned for broad, uniform spreads. Paddles are fabricated from tough, ¼" thick high strength steel. Bolt-on replacement tips are available to extend paddle life.

Constant velocity pto for continuous, smooth chatter-free power transfer when spreading on turns and reduced stress on the entire drive line.

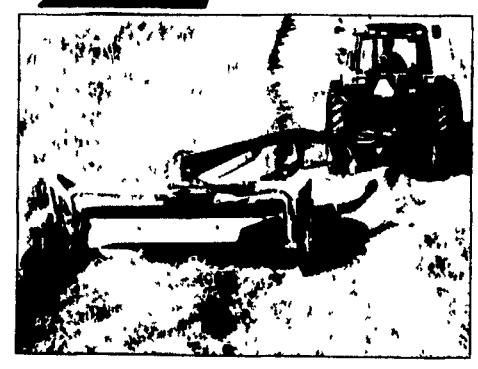
CASE IH

Proven & Tested To Customer Satisfaction.



The Case International 8312 disc mower conditioner just keeps on cutting – no matter what it encounters Tangled undergrowth, rodent mounds ant hills or heavy hay are no match for the heat-treated, high-speed rotary discs at the heart of the 8312

A center pivot tongue lets you cut a full 12-foot swath in either direction and maneuver around obstacles Lay down a quick-drying swath or fluffy windrow and, depending on your crop, conditioning rolls can be quickly adjusted for optimum drying

If continuous cutting with a center pivot machine is important to you stop in and see the Case International 8312

Plain Type With Soybean And Grass Seed Attachment, And Press Wheels
Equipped With Fertilizer Attachment, Press Wheels, Grass Seeder, And Soybean Attachment

There's nothing more important to a crop than early even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheels and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers.

We have One New 5300 Drill 16x7 With Fertilizer Attachment, Press Wheels, Double Disk Openers, And Seed View Cups, for Extra Savings Purchase Before Year End

When you buy a Brillion You Get The Best!

Brillion FLAIL SHREDDERS have the best heavy-duty gearboxes in the industry!

Gearbox failure is virtually eliminated. Brillion's Flail Shredder leaves a fine chopped residue that decomposes faster, helps control insects, absorbs moisture and helps prevent wind and water erosion. They're available in 12 and 15 foot widths.

PULVERIZERS 19' to 46' wide

Now Brillion offers Pulverizers up to 46' wide to match your larger size tillage tools. Lighter weight, 20" ductile iron* roller wheels make it possible to widen the machine without drastically increasing the weight and that means more firmed, clod-free seedbed acres per hour

Discover Quality... Discover Value...

The cornerstone of our product offering is the world's largest selling line of self-propelled forage harvesters—the Jaguar.

Next, Rollant round balers make dense bales that stand up and stay weather-tight, resist spoilage, and fit nearly any size operation. It's no wonder CLAAS is North America's leading importer of round balers.

Our world class Quadrant large square balers and Markant conventional size square balers offer the capacity to produce tight bales that keep the air out and minimize nutrient loss.

CLAAS® hay tools will meet your needs and exceed your expectations.

Volto rotary tedders reduce field time. Spread cut crops over an area up to 24 ft. wide, accelerate dry down and make hay in a day. High speed Corto rotary rakes gently sweep crops into windrows for easier baling. Liner twin rotor rakes clear a swath up to 24 ft. wide.

More also includes CLAAS's reputation for low maintenance, long-life, and service after the sale. You can expect more from CLAAS because we have more to give. Call now and see just how much more CLAAS has to give.

Meat Center Announces Results

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania's Meat Animal Evaluation Center has announced the results of the 84-day weighing of the bulls on Pennsylvania's Performance testing program.

The bulls are still gaining extremely well in spite of the severe winter. The bulls were weighed off test March 5 and then the bulls will be scanned ultrasonically to determine fat thickness and loin-eye area. The bulls will all be given a comprehensive breeding soundness exam and be required to meet minimum requirements for breeding soundless, semen quality and structural correctness.

The center will calculate a great deal of information on all of these bulls, such as adjusted 365 days weights, feed efficiencies, and current EPDs. The top 75 percent of the bulls will be offered in Pennsylvania's 23rd Performance Tested Bull Sale, scheduled for Friday, March 29.

The bull sale is again one of the focal points of Pennsylvania's 7th Annual Beef Expo scheduled for March 28-31 at the Ag Arena on the Penn State University campus. The highlights of the Expo are the educational symposium on Thursday; Friday will feature the bull sale, commercial heifer sale, and the annual Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA) banquet.

Saturday, March 30 will be a full day with the Junior Beef Skill-a-thon, Purebred Angus sale, Purebred Simmental sale, Purebred Polled Hereford sale, other breed sale, and the Junior Quiz Bowl. Sunday, March 31 will be the Junior Heifer and Junior Steer Shows. There will be a large trade show and animal exhibits throughout the Expo. A variety of food will also be available.

In the bull testing program, the 15 Simmental bulls have maintained a breed average daily gain of 4.25 pounds per day through 84 days on test. The top-gaining Simmental is the April 10, 1995 Holley's By The Numbers son Consigned by Miller and Shoemaker's Simmentals. This top-gaining bull overall breeds has gained 5.12 pounds per day on test with a ratio of 120. (A ratio of 120 means that he is 20 percent above the average gain of his breed.) The second fastest-gaining Simmental is the March 1st M4 Advantage son consigned by Kenneth Foust. This growthy bull gained 5.06 pounds per day on test and has a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.95 pounds per day.

The 28 Angus bulls have maintained a breed average daily gain of 4.09 pounds per day on test. The top-gaining Angus bull is the N. Bar Emulation EXT son consigned by Monica Feeser. This Feb. 14 bull has gained 5.04 pounds per day gain on test, a ratio of 123, and also has the highest lifetime weight per day of age among the Angus with a 3.80 pounds per day lifetime. The second fastest-gaining Angus bull is the DHD Traveler 6807 son consigned by Marlin and Steve Paul.

This March 16 bull gained 4.99 pounds per day on test with a ratio of 122. The 26 Polled Hereford bulls averaged 3.67 pounds per day on test. The top-gaining Polled Hereford is the I.G.S. Forecaster 173G son consigned by Paul and Bette Slayton. This January 1,500-pound bull has maintained a gain of 4.78 pounds per day with a ratio of 130. This bull also registers the top lifetime weight per day of age among the Herefords with a 3.77 pounds per day lifetime. The second fastest-gaining Hereford is the R.W.J. Perfect 849 326 son that was consigned by Ralph Strouse. This bull has gained 4.54 pounds per day.

The three Charolais on test have maintained a breed average daily gain of 3.96 pounds per day. The top-gaining Charolais is a BR Duke 295 son consigned by John Myers. This April 15 bull gained 4.24 pounds per day on test and also recorded the top lifetime weight per day of age with a 3.73 pounds per day. The second fastest-gaining Charolais is the MCF New Trend son consigned by Ray Bratton. This March bull gained 3.94 pounds per day on test.

The two Gelbvieh bulls gained an average of 4.07 pounds per day on test. Both of these bulls are owned by Dunkwalke Farm in New Jersey.
